Mystery Planes Rout Nanking Raiders

Court Bill Foe Is Snubbed By Roosevelt In Wyoming

Governor, Others Asked to Train, But Not O'Mahoney.

Pleas for Money Greet President

More Funds Needed for Relief and Farms, Leaders Say.

By the Associated Press.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Sept. 23.—Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, leading Democratic opponent of President Roosevelt's Supreme Court reorganization plan, said late today he had not received an invitation to accompany the President on his trip through Wyoming.

Senator O'Mahoney declared he was "happy" the President would visit Cheyenne, his home town, tomorrow morning, and added:

"I trust there will be a large throng on hand to greet him and to express the appreciation that all Wyoming feels for the accomplishments of his Administration."

H. H. Schwartz, junior Wyoming Senator and a supporter of the President's court bill, said he, Representative Paul R. Greever and Gov. Leslie Miller had received formal invitations to ride on the Presidential train.

Boone, Iowa (en Route to Pacific Coast With President), Sept. 23.—As President Roosevelt in two brief informal rear-platform talks today impressed on Iowans the return of prosperity, efforts were made by Democratic spokesmen for the Middle West to impress on him the need for additional Federal funds out here.

[The Associated Press reported President Roosevelt's special train arrived in Omaha at 10:40 p. m. (Central standard time). A small crowd was at the station.—Editor's note.]

Abandoning his original plan not to make any speeches until he reached Cheyenne, Wyo., tomorrow.

Stable Prices Aim.

In both speeches he emphasized the increased prosperity of the country, but did not touch on current controversial issues except to say at Marshalltown that his Administration is striving to bring about stabilization of farm prices. He ridiculed those who say they approve of his objectives, but dislike the methods he employs.

A man in the crowd at Marshalltown yelled: "We're voting for you in 1940." The crowd applauded. The President merely grinned.

Beside his two public appearances, the President during the day on his ride from Chicago across Illinois and Iowa and into Nebraska, saw many thousands of happy, laughing people and talked with half a dozen Democratic leaders in these States. From them he ascertained what people out here are thinking and their reaction to him.

Voters Neutral on Court.

Briefly summarized the things Mr. Roosevelt was told today were as follows:

1. The general mass of voters have been and remain indifferent to his Supreme Court reorganization plan, not particularly caring

Beating Alleged As Irene Castle Seeks Divorce

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—Irene Castle McLaughlin, who earned international fame as a dancer, filed a suit for divorce today against Maj. Frederic McLaughlin. Her complaint, filed in the superior court, charged cruelty.

Mrs. McLaughlin requested a division of property held jointly with her husband, a business man and sportsman who owns the Chicago Black Hawks hockey team.

The McLaughlins were married November 28, 1923. They have two children, Barbara Irene, 12, and William Foote McLaughlin, 8.

Through Attorney Robert E. Cantwell, jr., Mrs. McLaughlin charged her husband had forced her to leave their home last July 7.

The suit charged McLaughlin:

Gave her "a terrific punch in the face which knocked her 6 feet" while they were on a honeymoon in China in 1924.

"Knocked her against a chair in June of that year.

"Punched her in the nose, cracking it," in September, 1926.

By Edward T. Folliard

The two frigates were locked in a death struggle. Then, suddenly, the battle smoke cleared. High in the rigging of the Bonhomme Richard, outlined by the glare below, could be seen Old Glory, waving victoriously in the breeze. It was a sad night for mighty Britain.

From the floating bandstand came the rollicking strains of "Yankee Doodle," and 50,000 persons on the shore and along the bridge rails sent an exultant cheer across the Potomac.

Like those thousands who watched the real battle from Flamborough Head on the night of September 23, 1779, the 50,000 gathered at the Water Gate near the Lincoln Memorial to see a re-enactment of America's first great naval victory, the triumph of John Paul Jones' second-hand Bonhomme Richard over England's pride, the Serapis.

The battle, portrayed by silhouettes mounted on barges, and the Tennessee Drys Lead, 3-1, in Sentiment Vote

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 23 (AP).—First unofficial returns in Tennessee's unprecedented "referendum" on repeal of a 28-year-old prohibition law early tonight showed a three-to-one majority against legalization of liquor.

Boy, 12, Shoots Teacher, Turns Pistol on Self

Asks to See Girl, Fires When Principal Offers to Call Her.

By the Associated Press.

Toledo, Ohio, Sept. 23.—A 12-year-old pupil shot and seriously wounded Miss June Mapes, 59-year-old principal, in Arlington Public School today and then, Police Lieut. John Russell said, turned his pistol on himself.

The pupil, whom Lieut. Russell identified as Robert Snyder, was in a hospital tonight, with a gunshot wound in the head. His condition was fair.

Miss Mapes was in another hospital, her condition so serious detectives delayed questioning her. On bullet penetrated her abdomen. Three others went wild. Lieut. Russell said the boy entered the principal's office about 2:30 p. m., seeking to see a 12-year-old girl pupil.

Miss Mapes instructed him to wait until classes were dismissed. She said the boy insisted on seeing the girl at once and drew a pistol.

"I will get her," the principal then told Snyder, police said. She started for the door.

"No you don't," police quoted the boy as replying. "You're going to use the buzzer."

Before Miss Mapes could leave the room, detectives declared, he fired at her. He then ran from the school and through a ravine toward his home, discarding his school books in the gully.

Lloyds Retracts Report of Finding Yacht Endeavour

London, Sept. 23 (AP).—Lloyds of London announced tonight it had received a radio message from the British ship Amastra denying its previous advice that it had sighted the lost British yacht Endeavor I off the Azores Islands.

The message, signed by the captain of the Amastra, read: "Hearing it broadcast from London that the Amastra had sighted the yacht Endeavour I, I feel deeply concerned as I have not seen or heard anything whatever about her and gravely deplore the statement made."

Bride Sees D. C. Flier Killed As Plane Spins and Crashes

Pictures on Page 30.

A young Washington pilot spun to his death in a borrowed plane last night while his wife and a group of friends watched in horror from the Queens Chapel Airport, a mile and a half away in nearby Maryland.

In the impact of the plane with the ground, the pilot, Charles Wilson, 22, of 1925 Kearney street northeast, met instant death of a fractured neck.

At the airport watching the sickening, out-of-control spin of the plane were the flyer's wife, 21-year-old Helen Wilson, long-distance operator for the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., and a small group of friends.

Wilson, with about 35 hours' flying experience, took off from the Queens Chapel Field about 5:55 p. m. He crashed about ten minutes later.

At a height of about 1,500 feet the ship, an American Eagle, two-seater biplane, fell crazily in a spin and crashed with a roar. Witnesses found the plane upside down, its nose buried in the ground.

Six or eight persons were at the air field, most of them friends of the dead pilot, when Wilson attempted to return to the field. Among them was his pretty wife.

Witnesses on the field dashed to the fallen plane in automobiles. Wilson was dead when they pulled his broken body from the wreckage.

Parley Splits On Minimum Retail Wages

Workers Set Budget at $21.51; Employers Say $14.57 Is Enough.

Conference Will Make Further Study and Meet Again.

Employer and employe delegates to the District Minimum Wage Conference last night opened discussion of their respective minimum budgets for women employed by District retail firms.

The employers' delegation submitted an estimated weekly budget of $14.57 as necessary for a decent standard of living for a single woman retail employe, without dependents or outside income. The employe's estimate was $21.51 per week.

Argument centered on the item of weekly room rent, listed in the employer's budget as $3 out of the combined figure of $8 for room and board, and in the employe's budget as a separate item of $5.

Made Investigation.

W. H. Press, assistant secretary of the Board of Trade, spokesman for the employer's delegation, said that their room rent estimate had been reached after two months' investigation of available rooms, within a range of $2.50 to $5 per week.

Press said he had not investigated the actual living conditions of retail employes paying $3 a week and less, but that many $3 rooms had been inspected and that they offered conditions sutiable to protect "the health and morals of unattached female employes" as specified by the present minimum wage requirements.

Arnold Schoenthal, labor representative on the Minimum Wage Board described for the employe delegation the method of reaching their figure of $5. He stated they had investigated the rooming conditions of more than 3,000 women employes. He claimed their estimate represented the lowest figure at which healthy rooming facilities in suitable sections of the city could be obtained.

No Action Taken.

No action was taken on either estimate, but both groups indicated they would present more complete data on their budgets at the next meeting on Tuesday.

Beside the two budgets, copies of a report on the Minimum Wage Board op rooming and boarding conditions, food prices in restaurants, and prices of other commodities in the district, was submitted to the conference.

The report, based on study of more than 1,000 rooms, stated that the average minimum weekly price of single rooms is $3.98, the aver-

Rev. Steck Denies Marquette Found Father of Waters

St. Louis, Sept. 23 (AP).—The statue of Father James Marquette in the Hall of Fame at Washington credits the famous Jesuit and his colleague, Louis Joliet, with discovering the Mississippi River in 1673. So do many history books.

But history's mistake hunter, the Rev. Frances Borgia Steck, of Catholic University at Washington, who wrote a controversy-stirring thesis on the Marquette-Joliet expedition, disagreed today.

Father Steck declared his findings deny Father Marquette was the leader of the exploring party and that it was the first to discover the mighty river. The true discoverer, he asserted, was Hernando de Soto, in 1541.

Japanese Paper Warns U. S. to Keep Hands Off

U. S. Will 'Suffer' if It Won't Face Realities, Nichi Nichi Says.

Seizure of Capital Is Vital to Tokyo

French Mission Bombed, Three Powers Lodge Strong Protests.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, (Friday), Sept. 24.—The newspaper Nichi Nichi today warned that the United States "will only suffer greater damage in the end" if it seriously attempts to restrain Japanese bombing of China's capital, Nanking.

The paper declared the United States, Great Britain and other powers that protested further air attacks on the city were confusing legalities with realities.

It contended the fate of the entire Japanese campaign in China rested on the capture of Nanking.

"The moment that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek abandons Nanking he faces immediate and complete defeat both in North China and in Shanghai," Nichi Nichi said.

"This is because all the political, military, social and economic controls are concentrated in Nanking and Shanghai."

The newspaper expressed disappointment over the representations of the United States protesting the peril to its embassy and its citizens in the heavy air bombings of Nanking.

"The United States asks by what right in international law Japan warns diplomats to evacuate Nanking," it commented.

"Vice Admiral Kiyoshi Hasegawa's warning is not a matter to be regarded in the light of legal interpretations, of rights and obligations, but should be received in the spirit of good will with which it was offered."

(Hasegawa is vice admiral in charge of Japan's naval operations in China. He delivered Japan's notice to the other powers.)

"If Britain, the United States and Russia consider the matter as an object of feelings or international law and try to restrain Japan, the situation will only be aggravated and prolonged," the newspaper added.

Tientsin, China (Friday), Sept. 24 (AP).—The French Jesuit Mission at Siensien, southwest of Tientsin, one of the largest mission stations in China, was bombed today by Japanese planes.

American, French and other consuls immediately lodged strong protests with Japanese consular officials here.

The air raiders dropped 30 bombs. One of them struck the residence of Bishop Le Croart, head of the mission. Another damaged the mission's Women's Hospital, staffed with American, Canadian, Hungarian and other sisters. None of the sisters was injured.

Latest Developments In Far Eastern Crisis

The Tokyo newspaper Nichi Nichi warned that the United States "will only suffer greater damage in the end" if it seriously attempts to restrain Japanese bombing of Nanking.

A series of Japanese air raids left 3,000 Chinese civilians dead in Canton.

Throng Besieges Japanese Envoy's Home in London

London, Sept. 23 (AP).—Extra police rushed to protect the home of Japanese Ambassador Shigeru Yoshida late tonight when a crowd gathered in the street outside and shouted:

"Withdraw your bombers. Take the Japanese murderers out of China."

The demonstrators massed before the ambassador's door just before midnight, after marching around Grosvenor Square yelling anti-Japanese slogans. Hurriedly drafted police reserves formed a cordon along the front of the house.

$50 War Bonus Voted to Sailors By Commission

By William V. Nessly.

While State Department officials yesterday earnestly read reports of the Japanese bombing of Canton, carried out in the face of this country's note to Tokyo denouncing such attacks on noncombatants, the Maritime Commission sought to end the dispute raised by American seamen's demands for a "war bonus" for sailing into the war zone.

The commission voted a bonus of $5 per man per voyage on all Government-operated ships entering either Spanish or Chinese seas. Seamen have demanded a bonus of $250 per man. Efforts last night to reach Ralph Emerson, legislative representative of the National Maritime Union, to learn whether the commission's action would be acceptable were unsuccessful.

The commission also provided that should such ships be seized and interned, the pay of the crews would continue through the period of the internment and until they were returned to America.

9-Power Treaty Rumors.

State Department officials sought information on whether any Americans had been wounded in the Canton bombing. The United States' stern note to Tokyo had warned that that country would be held responsible for any damage suffered by Americans.

At the same time rumors filled the air regarding the possible invoking of the nine-power treaty guaranteeing the territorial and administrative integrity of China, though Secretary of State Hull said he had had no communication from any of the other governments on the holding of a conference.

Little information was available at the State Department on the situation in China, Secretary Hull saying there had been no new developments. Asked at his press conference whether there had been any response to this Government's representations to Tokyo against the bombing of Nanking, he repeated there was nothing new, and in reply to a question as to proposed action with the British and French governments on the Sino-Japanese

Tokyo (Friday), Sept. 24 (U.P.).—Negotiations are under way in Nanking and Moscow for a mutual Sino-Russian military assistance pact to bolster the recent nonaggression treaty adopted by the two countries, the Domei (official Japanese) News Agency reported from Shanghai today.

By the United Press.

Nanking, Sept. 23.—A fleet of "mystery" airplanes arrived in Nanking today, and tonight the Chinese government announced that its augmented air forces had beaten off a major Japanese attack on the capital.

"Fifty Japanese planes flying toward Nanking in a new effort to bomb the capital were intercepted by our enlarged air force over the city of Kiangyin (82 miles northwest of Shanghai) and driven back to Shanghai," an official statement said.

(This information was borne out by foreign military observers in Shanghai, who saw Japanese squadrons totaling about 50 planes leave the big Japanese air base on Tsungming Island, in the mouth of the Yangtze River, and the Japanese air field in the Yangtzepoo area of Shanghai's International Settlement and head for Nanking.)

Drop Bombs on Forts.

It had been apparent earlier to observers here that Nanking's air forces had been enlarged. Many new planes, of a design not seen here before, were tested over the capital this morning.

The Chinese would not reveal the source or number of the planes.

It also was apparent new anti-aircraft batteries had been received from an unknown source. Military attaches said the fire from those batteries was noticed yesterday, when Chinese markmanship was far more accurate than it had been in previous raids.

The war office said the Japanese planes dropped about 100 bombs on the Kiangyin forts before the Chinese ships drove them away.

3,000 Civilians Slain.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Canton, Sept. 23.—Fires spread through large sections of this great South China metropolis tonight in the wake of a devastating series of Japanese air raids which left 3,000 Chinese civilians dead in the streets.

Working in relays throughout the day, the giant Japanese bombers, convoyed by pursuit ships, droned back and forth over the city methodically and dropped dozens of bombs.

Many of the bombs were incendiary missiles which set fire to whole city blocks.

Railway stations, government buildings, the airdrome and military centers were in ruins.

Colored Catholic Named Messenger to Black As 'Routine Matter;' Justice Can Veto Choice

Leon A. Smallwood, colored Catholic, of 4427-A Hunt place northeast, has been selected by the office of the Supreme Court to serve as messenger to Justice Hugo L. Black.

Smallwood has been connected with the Supreme Court marshal's office for the past ten years. He is the father of four children.

Reached last night for comment, Frank Key Green, marshal of the court, hastened to state that Smallwood's selection was a "purely routine matter."

"He was selected in the usual manner after the resignation of Justice Van Devanter," Green said. "No one knew then that Justice Black would be appointed to the court vacancy."

Van Devanter's messenger now works in the marshal's office.

Smallwood was selected because he was at the head of the list of messengers connected with the Supreme Court marshal's office. Under a policy of rotation, he received the first position open with a justice.

Justice Black has been under fire for his alleged membership in the Ku Klux Klan, ardent foe in the past of the colored race, Catholics and Jews. The justice can veto the selection of Smallwood if he desires. A colored messenger is assigned to each justice.

Miss Ann Butt, who was associated with him while he was Senator from Alabama, has been picked by Black to serve as his secretary.

He has yet to appoint a law clerk. That selection will complete his staff for the new position he will assume when he returns from Europe.

G. O. P. Puts Mid-Term Convention Up to National Body

Party Leaders Fail to Agree On Hoover Plan

Most Members of Executive Committee Favor Call to Get Opinions.

By Robert C. Albright.

Proposals for a mid-term Republican National party convention in 1938 "to let the people of the country know where this party stands on fundamental issues" yesterday were referred to a November meeting of the Republican National Committee for "consideration and action."

By a unanimous vote, executive committee members sent the question to the full National committee, after internal differences arose on the plan. Although a majority of the executive group apparently favored the suggestion, Congressional members offered objections.

Credited to Hoover.

The proposal generally has been accredited to former President Herbert Hoover, who advanced the suggestion in a magazine article last month. But Hamilton yesterday went to pains to point out that he himself corresponded with members of the party on the plan a few weeks after the last election, and submitted it to an executive committee meeting last March 30.

Observers believe the convention might be used to maintain the independent identity of the Republican Party, as such, as opposed to proposals for a ne[illegible]itical coalition. Although leaders of the party would welcome enrollment in Republican ranks of anti-New Deal Democrats, many have been cool to the suggestion of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, for a formal coalition. Hamilton said coalition proposals were not discussed at yesterday's executive meeting.

Would Be in Chicago.

The convention, if called, will be held in Chicago.

Among executive committee members known to have raised objections to the midterm plan was Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican Congressional campaign committee. The Massachusetts Republican said he might waive his opposition if full agreement can be reached on agenda of the meeting.

Martin left Washington last night on a cross-country tour. He will confer Saturday with former Gov. Alf Landon, in Topeka, Kans., who is believed to share Hamilton's views on the national conference. Later he will confer with the Republican Congressional delegation in California, and with party leaders in Chicago.

Fears "Dogfight."

Martin fears a party conference held before the next Congressional elections might injure, rather than enhance, party chances if a dogfight over national "or even some trivial" issue ensues. He pointed out that Republicans running for Congress must base their platform primarily on local issues, and projection of some national questions might hinder them. He indicated he would not oppose such a meeting in 1939.

"Of course, it might be possible to work out an agenda for the conference that might be perfectly satisfactory, and if this is feasible, I would have no objection," he said.

Taylor Prefers Silence.

Another executive committee member who opposed the plan was Representative J. Will Taylor (Republican), of Tennessee. Taylor is said to feel that Republicans in recent months have improved their position through a strategy of silence, while Democrats warred among themselves. He is said to fear that a vocal Republican front might serve to unify Democrats, now badly split.

Others are said to have advanced the idea that such a conference might be used as a campaign vehicle for some one person, or persons, and thus operate for party disharmony.

"Not a Candidate."

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—Lawrence Richey, secretary to former President Herbert Hoover, said today Mr. Hoover "is not a candidate" for the Republican Presidential nomination in 1940.

Asked about published reports that the former President had refused to issue a statement removing himself definitely as a contender for th nomination, Richey said:

"Mr. Hoover is not a candidate and has said so a dozen times. He is not interested in any particular candidate. He is interested only in building up the party."

Head of Rhode Island Group Would Be Willing to Continue Voting in Minnesota if U. S. Would Accept 'Share' of Responsibility for Capital.

By Christine Sadler.

If the Federal Government would accept a "fair share" of responsibility for the District of Columbia and give it some say-so about its own budget, Dr. Freeman Weiss, of 3223 Vista street northeast, would be willing to continue to vote in Minnesota.

Dr. Weiss is president of the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association, which has approximately 800 members and is one of the most active civic organizations in Washington.

"I am not so sure we want general suffrage, provided we could have some control over our taxes and expenditures," he said, and he has been a District citizen for 16 years.

Founded in 1908, two years before the Federation of Citizens Associations, the group he heads has many accomplishments to its credit. Foremost among them Dr. Weiss lists:

1. Establishment of Taft Junior High School.
2. Establishment of the Woodridge Branch Library, of which the Woodridge Garden Club is an outgrowth.
3. Leadership in zoning and home ownership provisions that have kept the section a desirable residential area.
4. Establishment of Langdon Park.
5. The opening up of Eastern avenue from Bladensburg road to Bunker Hill road.

A map of the territory the association covers is constantly before the members and a copy of Neighborhood News—its official monthly publication—is always handy. From them it is easy to determine that the immediate aims include:

1. Development of Langdon Park as an all-year playground and community center. During the last summer an average of 500 children visited the park daily. The number at times reached 1,500.
2. Completion of Taft Junior High School by adding two wings, one of them to contain a gymnasium. The school is now five years old and the two wings were part of the original plans. The opening year it was filled to capacity, and during succeeding years students have been diverted to other buildings.

Until the school plans are completed, the association is not pushing much for a senior high school—although there is none in its territory. Part of the five-year plan of the Board of Education calls for one there, however.

3. Extension of Eastern avenue until it meets the Anacostia Park, and its development as a parkway that will make the eastern boundary of the District one of its most attractive areas.
4. Completion of the National Arboretum, which would give the area an outlet for hiking and camping, and the enlarged park facilities it needs.

Dr. Weiss is plant scientist for the Department of Agriculture and located the Beltsville, Md., Research Center. This accounts, he said, for his interest in park development for the northeast section in which he lives.

"We are not so fortunate topographically as some of the other parts of the District, and we must make up for it by artificial park developments. We can still get reasonably priced land for parks out here, and think it is more sensible to plan ahead than to tear down houses later on."

The expert plant knowledge of Dr. Weiss also carries over into his other two hobbies—gardening and color photography. His special interest among flowers is the the colorful azalea.

He spends from six to eight weeks in the southern azalea gardens each spring. Protection of the show gardens, nursery interests and private gardens from diseases forms a major part of his work with the Department of Agriculture.

No flower photographs in color more beautifully than azaleas, so Dr. Weiss always takes his camera along, especially to Charleston. He has had much success growing azaleas in Washington, although he has had but little time to develop a garden at his attractive new home on Vista street.

Dr. Weiss was born in Minneapolis in 1892 and lived there until he became a sergeant in the medical department of the Army during the World War. He came to Washington in 1921 to accept his present position, and almost immediately became an active member of the Rhode Island association. He received his bachelor's degree from the University of Minnesota and his Ph. D. from Cornell.

He has two children, a 16-year-old son and an 8-year-old daughter. Two of the prize possessions of the family are Sheila and Dixie—silken-haired black pups which are enough alike to pass for "identical twins."

Coal Body Calls Producers for Parley Monday

By the Associated Press.

The Bituminous Coal Commission summoned yesterday all members of producers' district boards east of the Mississippi River, except Alabama, to meet here next Monday for final hearings on minimum prices and classifications of coal.

Work of assembling data on costs and other information, developed through a series of hearings to the point where a prompt determination of prices can be made, commission members indicated.

Price scales proposed by producers in price areas east of the Mississippi are being filed with the commission. They include many hundreds of prices, specifying a rate for each class of coal from each mine involved.

Two Districts Not Agreed.

Only Districts 1 and 2, located in Pennsylvania, failed to reach an agreement on co-ordinated prices. For the last two days the two district boards have been meeting with J. O. Smith, chief of the commission's marketing section. Under an arbitration stipulation signed by the board, Smith will report to the commission today his adjudication of the differences between them.

The commission said it summoned the district boards to Washington so they may be prepared to deal promptly with any protests against the price proposals. Many protests filed will be referred immediately to the district boards before final action by the commission.

A commission spokesman said any increases necessitated by the law's requirement that coal shall not be sold below production cost should have no effect on the prices of household coal, which, he said, have been well above the cost of production. Adjustments undoubtedly will result in the prices of coal to railroads, utilities, and other large consumers who previously have been buying in some cases below the weighted average cost of production, it was said.

The commission issued yesterday its first orders of a judicial nature, granting conditional approval as marketing agencies to three applicants and denying such approval to four others.

The applications approved were those of Alabama Coals, Inc., of Birmingham, Ala.; Appalachian Coals, Inc., of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Smokeless Coal Corporation, of New York.

Applications denied were those of Raleigh Smokeless Fuel Co., of Beckley, W. Va.; Peale Peacock & Kerr, Inc., of New York; Rochester & Pittsburgh Coal Co., of Indiana, Pa., and Minter Fuel Co., of Beckley, W. Va.

The latter applicants, generally selling coal of their members, were found to be more in the nature of sales agencies than marketing agencies as defined by the law, the commission said. The applications of the four companies were dismissed without prejudice.

Anacostia Library Site in '39 Budget

The District Commissioners, preparing to conclude departmental hearings on 1939 estimates today, indicated yesterday the budget will include an item for the purchase of a site for a branch library in Anacostia.

Although 12 bids were submitted on construction of a Petworth branch library, the engineer department was unable to announce the low bidder. The Ross Engineering Co., of Washington, bid $180,000, limit of the authorization, but failed to submit an alternative bid under which furnishing would be let to another bidder.

AAA Protests As Bread Price Sets 7-Yr. High

Pound Loaf Is Half-Cent Dearer in 51 Cities, Survey Shows.

By the Associated Press.

Government economists protested against increased bread prices yesterday, declaring the upturn had added $50,000,000 a year to the public's food bill.

D. E. Montgomery, consumers' counsel of the Agriculture Adjustment Administration, contended the increases had been made "in spite of relatively low wholesale prices of bread ingredients."

He conceded hourly wages and total payrolls in the baking industry were higher than a year ago, but added:

"Available labor cost figures indicate that wages account for only a part of the enlarged spread between ingredient costs and wholesale bread prices."

Ten Billion Loaves.

Economists under his command based their calculation of the added cost to the public on an estimated annual consumption of 10,000,000,000 loaves.

Montgomery said a survey of retail bread prices in 51 cities showed the pound loaf was half-a-cent higher on August 17 than a year ago and was at the highest level in seven years.

Wholesale prices of ingredients that go into average white bread were lower in mid-August, he reported, than at any time in the last three years, except three months in the summer of 1936.

Half Cent Added.

The exception was the period immediately after the invalidation of processing taxes under the original AAA. The economists said these taxes, while in effect, had added about a half-a-cent a loaf to the of bread ingredients.

Montgomery said a survey showed the average loaf of bread sold for 8.9 cents on August in Winston-Salem, N. C., to as low as 6.9 cents in Denver, Colo.

Biggest increases during the last two years were reported at Kansas City, Mo.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Dallas, Tex., and Milwaukee. Some of these, officials said, were made after conclusion of "price wars" which had kept quotations low.

Wages Increased.

Montgomery's statement said hourly wages in the baking industry had increased 12 per cent and total payrolls about 25 per cent since 1935. He said census data for 1935 indicated wages were about 20 per cent of the total value of prodtion of the baking industry.

On this basis the statement said, increased labor cost would acccount for a 2½ per cent rise in retail bread prices in the past two years. Prices actually are 5 per cent higher, the statement added, despite removal of the processing tax cost of half-a-cent a loaf.

Red From Hoboken Loses Russian Post

Moscow (Friday) Sept. 24 (U.P.).—S. N. Dybetz, former Hoboken (N. J.) member of the Industrial Workers of the World, who rose to become head of the Soviet auto and tractor industry, has been removed to "other work," it was announced today.

Dybetz returned to Russia during the first years of the revolution. He was warned on June 14 to increase production or face trial, but nothing was announced until today.

100 Animals Taken Atop Shiva Temple

From Dr. Harold E. Anthony, mammalogist and leader of the expedition exploring the mysterious "sky forests" of the Grand Canyon, came word that he would return to the mainland Saturday.

Legion Asks World's Biggest Navy for United States

Closing Session Votes Doherty National Head

Opposition to Reds, Nazis and Fascists Also Part of Group's Program.

By the United Press.

New York, Sept. 23.—The American Legion closed its nineteenth national convention today by going on record in favor of the United States maintaining the largest navy in the world and increasing the strength of the Regular Army, National Guard and Reserve Corps.

Daniel J. Doherty, a Woburn, Mass., lawyer who enlisted in the Naval Reserve at Boston when America entered the World War, was elected national commander. He pledged himself to carry out "the mandate of the convention," which went on record as follows:

1. In favor of legal punishment of all persons who seek to overthrow, through fraud or violence, the United States Government.

2. Maintenance of a Navy "second to none;" increasing the Army to 180,000 men and 14,500 officers; a National Guard of 210,000; a Reserve Corps of 120,000; military training camps to train 50,000 youths annually; at least one well-equipped flying field in each strategic district; a ban on the export of helium.

Oppose Reds, Nazis.

3. Opposition to "communism, fascism, naziism and all other forces and organizations that seek to destroy the free institutions of our constitutional system."

4. A proclamation of official neutrality in labor disputes; a program of co-operation with industrial, civic and labor forces for re-employment of jobless men past 40.

5. Legislation making it possible to draft wealth and industry as well as man power during a war.

6. A recommendation for investigation of activities emanating from Italy, Germany, Russia, Spain or any other country looking toward promotion of foreign viewpoints in this country; deportation of undesirable aliens to "get them off the relief rolls."

Harry W. Colmery, retiring national commander of the legion, read a message from President Roosevelt which said "national prosperity" had "all but arrived."

Roosevelt Hails Prosperity.

"Were I to solicit the aid of the legion in the solution of any of the many pressing problems which confront us," the President's message said, "it would perhaps be that of unemployment. The legion is in a position, with its extended membership of all classes . . . to contribute materially to the success of the movement now well under way to absorb the unemployed into commerce and industry."

The following were elected national vice commanders: Drury Phillips, mining engineer and commander of the Texas department; Philip Conley, of West Virginia, historian and magazine editor; Harry M. Johnson, Anaconda, Mont., public utilities manager; James F. Daniel, jr., of South Carolina, county service officer, and James R. Mahaffy, of Hawaii, bond and insurance salesman.

Farley Retirement Seen After Election

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—The New York Post said today it had learned Postmaster General Farley would remain in the Cabinet at least until after the November election, when he probably will retire to private life.

The Post quoted Farley as saying he was considering several offers from business concerns, but had not decided which he would accept. One of the offers, it is understood, came from the Pierce-Arrow Co., which is said to have asked Farley to become its president.

3 Men Arrested For Arson Plot In Arlington

Owner of House, 2 Others Accused in Fire to Collect Insurance.

Three men were arrested and charged yesterday in connection with an explosion and a Labor Day fire in an Arlington County residence. Roger Daniel, 34, of 404 South Cleveland street, Arlington, owner of the dwelling at 414 South Edgewood street, was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Sheriff Howard B. Fields, charging him with conspiring and abetting others in destroying the structure.

Warrants charging the actual burning of the building were sworn out against William Stearn, 23, of Bailey's Crossroads, and Edgar Heishman, 25, of 634 Glebe road.

In addition, two colored men, Robert Shorter, 24, and 3519 Twenty-fifth street south, and Eddie Honesty, 26, of 1608 Arlington Ridge road, were held as material witnesses.

Daniel waived preliminary hearing before Judge B. M. Hedrick and was released under $3,000 bond. Stearn and Heishman were held.

Police said the two had confessed setting fire to the house after soaking parts of it with an inflammable material. Heishman, they said, confessed he threw the match. The explosion followed, and Stearn, who was inside, was blown unhurt, through a door.

Sex Slayer Dives 30 Feet in Prison, Fails to End Life

Dedham, Mass., Sept. 23 (AP).—Because the instinct to live was stronger than the will to die, Oscar Bartolini, convicted dismemberment slayer of pretty Grayce Asquith, tonight was alive after a 30-foot plunge from a grilled jail window.

Bartolini's right arm was broken in three places. His head and shoulders were bruised. Jail physicians asserted that, as he plunged head foremost toward the concrete floor of the "pit" in which he was exercising, Bartolini instinctively threw out his right arm to protect his head from the impending impact. Otherwise, they added, he probably would have crushed his skull in the fall.

Blackstone, Va., Sept. 23 (AP).—Gloria Allen, 17, member of a trio known as the Latavia, N. Y., parachute jumpers, was seriously injured today when she ripped her parachute in a 3,000-foot jump from a balloon at the Tri-County Fair here.

The girl, with a younger sister, Florence, 15, and her brother, Eddie, 19, have been making jumps here daily. A large crowd witnessed the accident.

Lipstick Art Taught.

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 23 (AP).—A course in "how to apply lipstick and rouge correctly" is being offered Albany high school students because, a school official said today, business has no place for the "gum-chewing, rouge-smeared" type of girl.

Army Supports Refusal to Fly Doubtful Plane

Test Pilots Are Backed in Action on Tamperings by Strikers.

Full support for Army test pilots' refusal to fly planes built by the Douglas Aircraft Co. at its Northrup plant in Dayton, Ohio, until after company fliers had flown the new craft was voiced yesterday by officials in the office of the chief of the Air Corps.

During recent strikes, they declared, the gas lines of two planes had been stuffed with rags. Hidden damage to the planes might not be discovered until they were in flight, and no Army pilots will be expected to take them aloft, it was said.

One officer described fatal crashes resulting from faulty airplane construction.

"So far," he said, "no one has been hurt as a result of sabotage. In no case of sabotage growing out of recent strikes at aircraft factories supplying the United States Government has injury or fatality to Army personnel resulted."

The decision to accept or refuse the planes lies with the Air Corps material division at Dayton and the Douglas Co. has been informed that the Army will back whatever conclusion is reached.

Leaders Map $100,000 Drive For Lunch Fund

50 at Meeting Determined That No D. C. Child Shall Hunger.

Determined that no school child in the District shall go hungry, more than 50 leaders in Washington's civic, business and social life met yesterday at the Willard Hotel and launched the 1937 campaign for free lunches for needy youngsters.

Goal of the drive will be the $100,000 necessary to feed more than 8,000 underprivileged pupils during the present school year. Labor necessary to dispense the lunches will be furnished and paid for by the WPA, but the food must be purchased by the funds raised by the District workers.

Chairman of yesterday's meeting was Mrs. John Boyle, jr., who directed the first free lunch campaign in 1933.

Two Benefits Booked.

A benefit boxing show at Griffith Stadium and a benefit performance of the opera "Rigoletto," both of which are tentatively scheduled for October 12, were pledged to aid in keeping hunger from little District residents.

The boxing bouts will be staged by Joe Turner, who will turn over his entire organization to see that they are a success. A representative of the Washington Popular Opera Association announced his willingness to allow boxes at the "Rigoletto" performance in Constitution Hall to be sold for the benefit of the fund.

Speakers at yesterday's gathering included Mrs. Boyle, Mrs. Mary Steele, District WPA official; Miss Marie Driscoll, WPA home economics consultant, and Dr. J. A. Murphy, of the District Health Service.

Mrs. Steele told of the part the WPA would play in the distribution and dispensing of the food, and in the handling of the labor costs.

Dr. Murphy estimated that 23 per cent of the District school children are undernourished, and stated that much disease, particularly tuberculosis, is bred by lessened resistance, due to improper and insufficient food.

Only Meal for Many.

In her talk, Mrs. Steele pointed out that for many of the children the meals at school would be the only complete reports upon which they could count, and that they would need these more and more as the weather grew colder.

Mrs. Boyle said all reports should be turned in to WPA headquarters at 460 C street, and funds will be received there also.

Those appointed to various committees in the drive included Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; Mrs. Lloyd Biddle, chairman of the Federation of Women's Clubs; John Saul, men's clubs; Sylvan King, Fairfax Oyster and Frank R. Jelleff, businessmen and merchants; "Radio Joe" Kauffman, radio; Mrs. Ernest W. Brown, Protestant churches; William Cogger, Catholic churches, and Mrs. John Safee, Jewish groups, and Arthur Clarendon-Smith, transportation.

Love-Letter Killing Is Denied by Typist

New York, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—Gertrude O'Keefe, bank typist, who locked prized love-letters in a safety deposit box and then hid the key in an aspirin box in her hair, answered "not guilty" calmly today when arraigned on a charge she murdered her former sweetheart, George O. Frank, middle-aged Wall Street teller.

The slender 37-year-old Miss O'Keefe was arrested yesterday, two days after the body of Frank was found in a gutter near her Brooklyn home. She said Frank, who several months ago became engaged to another woman, once threatened to kill her unless she returned his love letters.

Deck Hands Quit Picketed Vessels

San Francisco, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—Three hundred deck hands walked off ships in the harbor here today, refusing to work behind picket lines established along the entire waterfront by the Teamsters' Union in its fight against C. I. O. longshoremen. Six ships were tied up.

2 Held for Grand Jury In Roosevelt Robbery

Two colored youths were ordered held for the grand jury yesterday when arraigned in Police Court charged with robbing the Georgetown home of James Roosevelt.

The youths, James Dyson, 17, 3600 block N street northwest, and Conrad F. Carter, 20, 1200 block Thirty-seventh street northwest, waived preliminary hearing. Police said evidence in connection with other Georgetown housebreakings will be presented against the youths to the grand jury.

Roosevelt Snubs Court Bill Foe, Leaves Him Out of Train Party

Governor and Other Wyoming Senator Are Invited But O'Mahoney Is Not; Money Pleas Greet President.

one way or the other what happens in that regard.

2. Democratic leaders in Chicago are seriously disturbed over the revelation of Justice Black's Ku Klux Klan affiliations and believe something should be done to offset that Roosevelt "mistake."

3. More Federal relief funds are needed, not only in the corn belt, but in Chicago, even though economic conditions generally have improved in both sections.

4. People generally remain enthusiastic about the President and would give him this year about the same support they gave him last year.

In other words the gist of what Mr. Roosevelt heard today could be more briefly summarized in the phrase: "All we want is more cash and you can do as you like." This was a sort of theme song of those boarding the train from Chicago to the Nebraska line.

Foremost proponent of that theme was Gov. Roy L. Cochran of Nebraska, who joined the Presidential train at Chicago this morning and left it near midnight at Omaha. He dined with President and Mrs. Roosevelt tonight. But the theme also was put forward by Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago and other figures of lesser importance.

Crowds Give Welcome.

Meanwhile, Mr. Roosevelt changed his plans to wait until he reached Wyoming tomorrow for his first rear platform appearance. He made two appearances in Iowa today, one at Clinton where approximately 4,000 persons—about one-half of whom were children—greeted him, and at Marshalltown, where the crowd numbered approximately 2,000. In Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where the train did not stop but slowed down to eight miles an hour, men and women lined the railroad tracks for more than a half mile.

These crowds showed enthusiasm for the President and he responded warmly and in simple but glowing words. At Clinton, Iowa, which Mr. Roosevelt visited for the first time, he was given an uproarious ovation and was serenaded by the town band in gay blue uniforms. He walked around the platform and leaned over the brass-railed sides in order to wave at all those present.

"I'm glad to get back to Iowa," he asserted. "I have been happy all day to see that the corn is a lot better than last year.

"This is another trip of inspection. I have made one of these trips every year for the last four years. I thought I would come out again to see how things are getting on—and things seem to be getting on pretty well. It's nice to see you."

"I am very happy to see you," spoke up Mrs. Roosevelt, "I think your corn is grand."

"Your corn is a little bigger than corn in Dutchess County (where he lives)," the President chimed in.

The crowd cheered him as enthusiastically as though he had made some announcement of great importance. Many of those who gathered around the train's end at Clinton were railroad workers off duty. Conversation with some of these workers, not only in Iowa but also in Chicago, revealed Mr. Roosevelt is very popular with them.

"I am glad to come back to Iowa after an absence of nearly a year," the President said at Marshalltown. "As you know, I am not making a campaign trip, but merely doing what I think every President ought to do, and that is, once a year, try and see something of the country at first hand.

"As a matter of fact, I know a lot of you good people here are interested in one of the objectives of Government—the stability of crop prices. It is one of the big things that we have let slide this year, and we know what happens to the country when corn and cotton and wheat and other major crops fluctuate up and down the scale and people haven't got any idea, when they plant their crops, what they are going to get for them when they reap them.

"That is something, I believe, that modern civilization must solve and can solve, and I am not speaking in a party spirit, as you know."

Wants Views on Methods.

"On this trip I am talking to many people about methods to be used in obtaining those ends. You know, a lot of people mix up objectives with methods and, sometimes, when they don't like the objectives, they say, 'Oh, yes, we do like the objectives, but we don't like the methods proposed by this particular fellow.'

"Well, I am not in love with any particular methods, but I am in love with the particular objectives which the people are after and I am after.

"That is why tomorrow, when I will be in the beet sugar area and cattle area, I will be trying to get at first hand what the people are thinking about; and trying to get at first hand the methods to be used in gaining the objectives, because I am certain that we are together as to what those objectives are."

Previously, at Beverly the President said: "I've had a good talk with your Governor for three minutes. It's good to be back here again and I'm glad to see things look a lot better than they did a year ago at this time."

He waved and smiled when someone in the crowd yelled: "Thanks for coming to see us, and come back again." When a man cried: "Let's hear from Mrs. Roosevelt," the President's wife responded, "I wish you all good luck."

Horner Among Conferees.

Among those who talked with the President during the one hour and a half his train was in the Chicago railroad yards were Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois; Senator William H. Dietrich (Democrat), of Illinois; Representative A. J. Sabbath (Democrat), of Illinois, dean of the House; Howard Hunt, regional WPA director; Democratic National Committeeman Patrick J. Nash, and several local politicians.

Mayor Kelly revealed he was chiefly worried about the fact that Federal relief money for Chicago was running short. His present allotment, he said, would run out about November 1 and he did not know what would happen unless more money was forthcoming from Washington.

He was not very communicative to the press about the Black episode, but admitted discussing it with the President—"in a kidding way," he said. Gov. Horner, however, said he was upset about alleged Klan affiliations of Justice Black.

Representative Sabath was the most candid on that point. He said he told the President he believed the Black episode had its damaging aspects, but that on the whole it might serve the good purpose of blasting the Ku Klux Klan out of existence for all time.

3 Instructors Added to Staff At Catholic U.

Trio to Augment Faculty at Law School of University.

Three instructors have been added to the faculty of the school of law of the Catholic University, according to an announcement made yesterday by Dr. Robert J. White, newly appointed dean of the school.

The instructors are Dr. Thomas C. Billig, senior attorney with the Social Security Board and former professor of law at Duke University and West Virginia; M. Quin Shaughnessy, senior attorney with the Securities and Exchange Commission, and James F. Ryan, formerly of the University of Iowa and DePaul University.

Dr. Billig is a member of the Pennsylvania bar and the bar of the United States Supreme Court. For several years he was associated with the New York law firm of Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine. Early in 1934 he became director of legal research for the NRA, a post which he held until that agency was disbanded in 1936. He then became senior legal analyist for the President's committee on economic analysis, which prepared the final review of the accomplishments of the National Recovery Administration. At Catholic University he will teach courses in personal property and the administration of decedent's estates.

Shaughnessy is a law graduate of Harvard University and has had extensive experience in Government service. Prior to his work in the Securities and Exchange Commission, he was associated with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Treasury Department, the Petroleum Administrative Board and was an assistant solicitor in the Interior Department.

Ryan, a graduate of the State University of Iowa, returns to Catholic University law school after an absence of three years. He will lecture on taxation.

Shabby Valise Holds $18,000 Belonging to Dead Amnesiac

Secured only in a cardboard suitcase, bound with a piece of cord, $18,000 worth of negotiable German bonds and insurance policies, belonging to Herman Bode, 72-year-old wanderer, who died in Gallinger Hospital last week, were found in a Union Station checkroom by police yesterday.

With the bonds was the will of the friendless old man who died of starvation while he had $1,492 in his pockets. He died without revealing any information about himself other than his name and that he came from Hoboken, N. J.

Police for more than a week have attempted to locate relatives of Bode. More than 50 persons have claimed relationship, but police refused to believe the stories until definite proof was presented.

Yesterday Detective Sergt. William J. Liverman recovered Bode's baggage, a suitcase and two trunks, from the checkroom. In a small unlocked strongbox in the grip several envelopes contained $10,000 worth of the German railroad bonds from which the premium coupons never had been clipped.

Four annuity insurance policies worth $8,000 also were found. Each policy paid $28 monthly.

In the bottom of the cheap valise was the will dated April 24, 1923. It left all his property to a brother and sister and two nieces, the daughters of a dead brother, all of whom live in Hanover, Germany.

Adolph Meyer, also of Hanover, was named by Bode as the executor. The will stated he was to receive $200 for services and compensation for expenses.

Mrs. Wilhelmine Brabetz and Ferdinand Bode, brother and sister, and the nieces, Lisete and Martha Bode, daughters of Edward Bode, will receive the entire fortune.

Bode, when he was found wandering several weeks ago, had $1,492 in his pockets, bank books listed deposits of more than $16,000 in six New York and New Jersey banks.

Also set forth was the request that all moneys, "a considerable amount" in a safe-deposit box in the Steneck Trust Co., of New York, go to the beneficiaries.

Meanwhile, Bode's body remains unclaimed at District Morgue. Police last night, through the German Embassy, were attempting to notify relatives named in the will of his death.

French, Rebels Trade Protests On Sub 'Theft'

Insurgents to Oust Consul Unless Officer Is Given Liberty.

By the Associated Press.

Bayonne, France, Sept. 23.—While French authorities inquired deeper into a plot to steal a Spanish government submarine from the harbor at Brest, France and insurgent Spain today exchanged protests over complications arising from the incident.

The insurgents were exercised over the arrest of Maj. Julian Troncoso, an insurgent officer, on charges of trying to steal the submarine last Saturday night. If Troncoso is not released, the insurgents declared, the French consul at Malaga will be expelled from Spain.

The French protest demanded that Pierre Desmartis, French consul, be released from detention in his consulate at insurgent-held Malaga, southern Spain. It was asserted his detention by the insurgents, in reprisal for the arrest of Maj. Troncoso, was "inadmissible."

Arms Factory Destroyed.

Madrid, Sept. 23 (AP).—A Spanish government communique declared tonight that a heavy artillery bombardment of insurgent-held Toledo, 50 miles south of here, destroyed an important insurgent munitions factory and critically injured Gen. Jose Varela, one of the insurgents' highest-ranking commanders.

Fire was said to have wrecked the factory after government batteries poured more than 1,000 shells into the group of buildings composing it, in a five-hour assault.

Rebels Advance in Snow.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Sept. 23 (AP).—Spanish insurgent troops trudged through fresh-fallen snow tonight into the outskirts of Covadonga and Cangas de Onis, bulwarks of the fortified line protecting Gijon on the east.

Naval guns and air forces joined the marching columns in opening the "big push" against this line, some 30 airline miles east of Gijon, last important government-held seaport on Spain's northern coast.

Charles Greer Dies Of Heart Ailment

Charles E. Greer, 66, resident of Washington for many years, died yesterday at his home, 902 Sixth street northwest, following a heart attack. He had been in failing health for several years.

Born in Washington, Mr. Greer was formerly employed at the postoffice for 15 years. He left Government service 25 years ago. For several years he made his home in St. Augustine, Fla., and later had been in the office supply business.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Edna Bowman Greer; a brother, Harry Greer, and a sister, Mrs. Nellie McChesney, of Washington, and two daughters, Mrs. J. W. McKee, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Richard Hunt, of Bethesda, Md.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow in Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin street northwest. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

WPA Heads to Be Guests at Film

Mrs. Hallie Flanagan, national director of the Federal Theater project of the WPA, heads a group of Federal Theater project officials who have been invited by John J. Payette, general zone manager, Warner Bros. Theaters, to see "They Won't Forget," at the Metropolitan Theater tonight.

Reason for their interest in "They Won't Forget" is the fact that the leading feminine role is played by Gloria Dickson, youthful actress, who won her screen contract as a result of a performance in "The Devil Passes," with the Los Angeles group of the Federal Theater project.

Others who will be guests of Mr. Payette are J. Howard Miller, deputy director of Federal Theater project; George Gerwing, acting assistant director for WPA Regions Nos. 1 and 2; Josef Lentz, assistant director for WPA Region No. 3; Herbert Ashton, jr., assistant director for WPA Midwest region; Ole Ness, acting assistant director for WPA Region No. 5, and George Condolf, director for WPA in New York City.

Bishop Who Fled Russia After Reds Won Visits His Son, Now a Capital Policeman

Antonin Pokrovsky, Bishop of Washington and Alaska.

October, 1919. Three White armies were converging on Moscow, seat of the fledgling Soviet government.

Driving hard from Siberia was the command of Admiral Kolchak, investing Kazan and Samara on the Volga. Moving westward from Estonia on the Baltic was the Allied-backed force of Yudanich. But the greatest threat came from the southwest, where Gen. Denekin's armies were deploying within 200 miles of the Red capital.

One night shortly after Denikin's troops had bivouacked outside Orel, the lights of a passenger train, Moscow bound, were picked out by White sentries through the dense October fog. The train was halted. Passengers were forced to alight. One was a 50-year-old archpriest of the Russian Orthodox Church, a former chaplain to the imperial court.

Visits His Son Here.

Yesterday that archpriest, now a bishop, told of the fateful days that followed the defeat of the White armies at Orel and their final debacle at Novorossick.

He is Antonin Pokrovsky, Bishop of Washington State and Alaska, here on a visit to his son, A. A. White, now a member of the Capital police force.

Despite the success of the Bolsheviks and the overthrow of Kerensky, Father Pokrovsky was returning to Moscow that night after a trip to relatives in the country.

"I would have stayed in Russia," he said yesterday, "despite rumblings of an antireligious revolt. But falling into the hands of the Whites completely changed my plans and my destiny."

Denikin Is Beaten.

And, so Pokrovsky, who formerly had been chaplain to the navy, army and imperial court, found himself attending to the spiritual needs of the "hell-bound-for-Moscow" Gen. Denikin.

But Denikin was not dated to see the snow-blanketed minarets of the Kremlin. His offensive, heavily repulsed at Orel, soon crumbled and fell to pieces. By April of 1920 he had fled to Constantinople, leaving his chaplain in a Black Sea town, the victim of typhoid.

Help came, however, to the stricken Russian priest. A friendly allied ship evacuated him and others to Cyprus. A year later he was in Palestine, severing his last connections with the earth. For it was there he took the vows of a monk from a bearded Russian patriarch.

Hears From His Son.

The years passed. And then one day came a letter from America, from his only son, Alexander Alexis, now A. A. White and an American citizen. Alexander had been an officer in the imperial navy and had fought with Admiral Kolchak in the ill-fated drive on the Soviet capital. With defeat came exile, first to Harbin, then to Shanghai. The year '23 found him in Vancouver, and soon after in Seattle, Wash.

Thus it came about that Father Antonin left the war-shattered fields of the Near East for the peace and hitherto unknown happiness of the New World. He now divides his time between San Francisco, Washington State and Alaska, touring the bishopric to which he was appointed in 1930.

He likes it here—"else I would not have become an American citizen." As for Russia—ah, well, I lost that and my wife."

But his son thinks differently. He still hopes for a "comeback." "Russia is a country where you can expect anything, any time," he said.

Governor Spurs Brinkley Hunt; Glasses Found

Peery Responds to Plea of Relatives for More 'Action' in Case.

Broken spectacles, missing for several days and regarded as vital clews in the mysterious disappearance of Charles A. Brinkley, were returned to Arlington County authorities yesterday as a hunt for the missing Washington contractor was spurred by Gov. George C. Peery of Virginia.

The spectacles were stolen from the front seat of the contractor's car parked outside the Arlington Jail. County detectives made no comment on their whereabouts during the days they were missing.

Gov. Peery entered the case yesterday when he instructed Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence Douglas to press the hunt for the 47-year-old man who vanished from his car on Kirkwood road a week ago Wednesday. The Governor was responding to a plea of relatives for "more action."

At the same time Mrs. Charles Brinkley called upon Washington police to investigate a man she suspects of being implicated in the case. Detectives at headquarters told her they had no jurisdiction and would not question the suspect unless requested to do so by Arlington police.

The Arlington police said yesterday they were tracing the spectacles to Brinkley's oculist, Hall, Inc., in Norfolk, Va., where he formerly resided. Mrs. Brinkley, shown the glasses by Commonwealth's Attorney Douglas, was not sure they belonged to her husband. She could not identify them positively, she said.

Terre Haute, Ind., Sept. 233 (AP).—John L. Lewis was termed a "modern Judas" here today by delegates to the Indiana Federation of Labor convention in a resolution that condemned the C. I. O. chieftain for his recent radio criticism of President Roosevelt.

The strongly worded declaration charged Lewis was almost destroyed the efficiency of the United Mine Workers through his "autocratic desires," and bluntly accused him of seeking to be a dictator.

Wilkins' Rescue Ship Forced Down on Lake

New York, Sept. 23 (U.P.).—The plane carrying Sir Hubert Wilkins and four companions, returning from an unsuccessful polar search for the six missing Russian fliers, was forced down tonight on a small lake near Lake Bubonnet, 50 miles northeast of Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Wilkins took off in his seaplane this afternoon from Lake Morrison, 300 miles northwest of Winnipeg, for Lake Dubonnet. Poor visibility caused the fliers to come down.

The Post Loses Friend in Death; 'Doug' Ran Elevator 35 Years

Cheery Shout of 'Comin' Right Up' Will Be Long Remembered.

EDWARD DOUGLAS.

Edward Douglas, colored, died early yesterday at his home, 4406 Hayes street northeast, and the staff of The Post feels they have lost a friend. Doug had been an elevator boy in The Post Building for 35 of his 55 years; had, in fact, grown grizzled and stooped in the service.

Although increasingly ill, Doug stuck to the job until about a month ago. The cheery "How-do!" with which he greeted his patrons never lacked warmth. "Comin' right up!" he continued to shout reassuringly up the elevator shaft in answer to impatient reporters' buzzes. To the end his reply to inquiries about his health was always, "Fair to middlin'!"

A native of Prince Georges County, Md., Doug came to work for The Post before the death of Beriah Wilson and the purchase of the paper by John R. McLean. At that time The Post elevator was a hydraulic affair. To operate it, Doug had to pump up and down on a hand lever.

In 1905 the elevator service was interrupted for six weeks while an electric machine was installed. Glad as Doug was that his pumping days soon would be over, he didn't like the idea of abandoning his guardianship of the building for that length of time. So while the workmen installed the elevator, Doug was given a temporary job distributing mail to the various departments.

To estimate the number of celebrities he learned to know by name is as difficult as it would be to count up thte number of vertical miles which he traveled during his lifetime. Gen. Pershing was one of those he met in the course of his duties at The Post, and there were dozens of other soldiers, statesmen and diplomats.

He was a member of the Church of the Incarnation. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Rachel Douglas; a brother, Arthur Douglas, and three sisters, Sarah, Ella and Margaret Douglas.

Services will be held Monday at 9 a. m. at the Church of the Incarnation, Deanwood, and burial will follow in the church cemetery.

Men and Dioramas.

Those dioramas that depict the evolution and efforts of the Interior Department are second to none in America. One of the fathers of dioramas says so.

You may think this is a natural thing for Ned J. Burns, chief curator, museum section of the Park Service, to say. And more so since Burns is directly in charge of them. But he doesn't say so with the pardonable pride of an officiating officer. He says so out of the eyes of an artist.

The Washington Post carried a lengthy article on the dioramas last Sunday explaining how these will give the most casual visitor an impressive glimpse of the department's work. We left the half-completed museum section yesterday with the feeling that a visitor also will have a genuinely beautiful glimpse of the department.

The work has been so painstaking. Most of it has been done in the Ford Theater Museum workshop, under the hands of Arthur A. Jansson, Lee Warthen, Rosario Fiore, Donald Johnson, Albert McClure and Frank Urban.

The marvelously achieved backgrounds are the work of Jansson and Warthen; Fiore and Johnson did the modeled figures, and McClure and Urban worked the foregrounds. They have done, in all, some 12 dioramas, but only half of these have been fixed in the museum. But what is finished is finished entirely, even to the lighting and the slanting glass that reduces reflection.

The scenes emerge, three-dimensional, and you stand there with the feeling that some magic stopped suddenly those episodes in American life, clasping the men and women in their life-like moods and setting them behind the glass upon backgrounds they must feel the greatest familiarity with.

Delicate Detail.

They are waxen men and women, dressed to the most accurate and delicate detail. Washington meets Lafayette at Morristown, N. J., and a crowd of men and women watch the Colonial amenities exchanged. (Interior is doing work of restoration at Morristown). There is a campfire scene: around the glow are the men, ruddy-faced people, who first explored the Yellowstone and felt that such natural wonders belonged to all the people. (Interior oversees Yellowstone and the other national parks). There is Boulder Dam in diorama; a scene at the Guthrie Land Office; the Indian Rock in the Navajo Reservation, and a ghostly exposition of a mine explosion. The artists caught the mine explosion and made it weep, just as the miners' wives on the sidelines are sad-faced or outwardly hysterical. They even toned down the sky to overshadow the atmosphere.

Some who have enjoyed a preview have asked if the demolished mine shaft was first built by the artists, then knocked down with a hammer. Instead, the artists had photographs of the twisted wreckage of a shaft, and then by the scale inch—and with all manner of perspective problems to bother with—set up the wreckage, piece by piece.

Fortunately, no one placed a time limit on them; they developed the scenes rather on the schedules of competent work. And if slang can be applied on the premises of art, they've got something.

Burns—who 20 years ago pioneered dioramas and later served as assistant director, Museum of the City of New York, and at the American Museum of Natural History—can't forecast when the museum will be formally opened. He wants it well done before turned to public view, and the public will sympathize with his attitude.

But it wasn't Burns who originally had the idea of the Interior dioramas. It was Secretary Ickes. Really, this is true; no underlings are giving the credit to Ickes. He really and personally thought up the idea.

* * * *

Incidental note on Burns: It was he who urged Mary Louise Rogers to compete in the I. D. R. A.'s recent beauty contest, which Mary Louise Rogers won. It seems that Miss Rogers is the secretary of Burns and had no idea of competing would not have, except for her chief's insistence.

Veterans' Administration Local No. 15, U. F. W. A., will relax from all the panting and perspiration of its fall membership drive at a party this evening in the Hayloft, Massachusetts avenue and Thomas Circle. Employes of the V. A. will be guests. The hour is 8:15 o'clock. There will be dancing and refreshments.

State Aids CCC.

To a large extent, institutional attendants in the Maryland State service are being recruited from CCC camps. Over 40 young men from the camps have been so placed within the last four months, according to Col. Harry C. Jones, State employment commissioner. Camp educational directors and the medical directors jointly recommend boys to Jones' consideration. These recommendations take the place of the usual non-competitive examinations conducted quarterly by the commission for subordinate positions. Enrollees receive 30 days' leave from the camps and serve a probationary period at the institutions. According to their work during the period, they are given regular employment or are sent back to the camps. Several boys have enrolled in student nurse training courses and will be graduated as practical nurses. Col. Jones believes the States get the break from this system, pointing out how the boys are trained in first-aid, maintenance and other semi-skilled occupations by the camp routines.

Hazen Sponsors Sultan's Daughter, Denies Nepotism

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday took full responsibility for the appointment of Miss Sheila Sultan, pretty 20-year-old daughter of Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, as a stenographer of the Real Estate Commission.

Hazen, denying it was a case of nepotism, for which District officials were criticized in Congress last session, said he had suggested Miss Sultan file an application when the commission was set up.

Tax Assessor Fred D. Allen, who is chairman of the board, recommended her appointment, and the Commissioners approved it. Miss Sultan, just out of school, will get $1,440 a year.

I will not be responsible for any debts contracted by my wife unless she will meet me at the Mayfair, 13th and F Sts., every night (and Sunday) for dinner and cocktails.

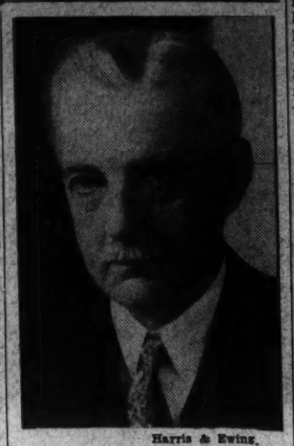
William Millan, Former Head Of Districtt Bar, Is Dead at 74

Veteran Attorney Taught at National U., Led Alumni Body.



Harris & Ewing.
W. W. MILLAN.

William Walter Millan, 74, past president of the District Bar Association, died at a private hospital on Connecticut avenue yesterday. He had been ill several months.

For nearly 50 years Mr. Millan had been an attorney here. He was senior member of the firm of Millan & Smith, formed on New Year's Day, 1898, and the oldest law firm in the city to continue without changing personnel.

A member of the faculty of National University, Mr. Millan was president of its alumni association since 1935. He was the son of Walter R. Millan, a lawyer at Farifax, Va.

He came to Washington in 1885 and entered Government service in the auditor's office at the War Department. Studying at National University, he received his LL.B in 1888 and his master's degree a year later. Shortly afterward he married Miss Jennie Stier, daughter of F. A. Stier, first cashier of the Lincoln National Bank.

Mr. Millan and his bride then went to Nashville, Tenn., where he practiced law until 1890. Later he taught school at Murfeesboro, Tenn.

In February, 1890, Mr. Millan returned to Washington, where he passed the bar. Until May, when he became ill, he had been active in his firm. When he was stricken, he was taken from his home, 1921 Kalorama road, to Sibley Hospital. Pneumonia developed, and he never fully recovered.

Prospective Appellate Judge.

Mr. Millan was mentioned prominently for appointment to the United States Court of Appeals for the District not long ago. He had the indorsement of the entire District bar.

He was president of the District Bar Association in 1933, and before that had been its treasurer for 20 years. He was an active member of Francis Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church South, belong to the board of stewards, taught Sunday school and served as lay leader of the Methodist Church for the Washington district.

Mr. Millan was an Odd Fellow, a member of the University Club, and for several years president of the old Board of Children's Guardians of the District.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Horace Eppes, of Larchmont, N. Y.; two grandchildren and two sisters.

Schools Unite In Safety Drive To Honor Dead

Speakers at Western High Assembly Are Cheered; Campaign Mapped.

Dedicated to the proposition that "something can be done" about the specter of death on the highway, Washington's public school youth yesterday set up a living memorial to former schoolmates who died early this month in a traffic collision.

The "memorial," a spontaneously organized campaign to make motor ways safe for all, received an enthusiastic sendoff yesterday morning when 2,000 Western High School students met in special assembly to pay a tribute to Jimmy Leech and Elmer Hays. These boys, members of the Western High class of '36, were killed with two other members of the Hays family September 3 in the collision of their car and a bus just outside Washington.

Applaud Challenge.

Boys and girls in the auditorium applauded thunderously when one speaker challenged them to turn a sad occasion into a memorable one by declaring war on traffic accidents. They pledged support to a plan to organize safety leagues in every high school in the city.

"We're here not only to pay tribute to the two boys we loved so much," declared Allan Brown, Western graduate and Maryland University student, who was a personal friend of Jimmy and Elmer. "The accident that cost their lives made death more than just a word in the vocabulary for all of us. I know that many of us are here to take the lesson of that accident to heart."

Brown asked for a show of hands from all students who drove cars, or who expected to drive them sometime. The response produced a sea of lifted arms.

Proposes Safety Clubs.

"That's serious," continued Brown, "because, according to statistics, four out of every five of you are going to receive some injury from accidents on the highway."

He proposed an organization of traffic safety clubs as a fitting memorial to Leech and Hays.

Such clubs have been decidedly effective in curbing traffic mishaps in other cities, declared Richard Ham, American Automobile Association safety director, in another address.

"A memorial of the living is the best possible memorial to these dead," he told the students.

"Up to now all the safety drives have been started by our elders," declared Adrian Recinos, Western student. "It's time we students took the problem in our own hands, and plan to do something about it."

Campaign Mapped.

And Helen Bell, another Western student, made a plea for such support to the proposed safety drive as will make it a "credit to Western."

After the assembly, student representatives from every high school in the city met with Ham and mapped out the campaign. Attending the conference were William Geneisse, of Anacostia; John Green, of Western; George Blanchard, of Eastern; William Zeller, of McKinley; Robert Rands, of Roosevelt; John Cragoe, of Wilson, and Adrian Recinos and Helen Bell, of Western.

These students agreed to report back to their respective student bodies. Among activities discussed were the preparation of playlets and radio programs, surveys of traffic conditions and protective devices, such as signs, signals and markers in the vicinity of schools, and studies of accident records.

While the organization to promote safe driving and safer walking and its activities will represent a strictly high school program, it will have the co-operation of the American Automobile Association in the development of its program.

Shea Quits as Aide For U. S. Attorney

Walter M. Shea, for more than a decade an assistant United States attorney, has tendered his resignation to United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett and is preparing to enter the private practice of law, it was learned yesterday.

Shea began his career in the District Court as secretary to the then United States Attorney Peyton Gordon. After his graduation from law school was made an assistant. At the instigation of Col. Garnett he was especially assigned to the defense of Veterans' Bureau suits. He lost only two cases in the 600 he tried, and both are now on appeal.

In commenting on the leaving of Shea, Col. Garnett said that "he was one of the most capable members of my staff."

Man Indicted for Arson, Insurance Murder Plot

Media, Pa., Sept. 23 (AP).—The Delaware County grand jury today indicted Albert R. Knight, of Lansdowne, on a charge of attempting to murder his three daughters, who were sleeping in the family home when fire started last May 28. An indictment for arson also was returned by the jury. The State contends Knight had his daughters heavily insured. He is free under bail.

Student Deaths Start Western Safety Campaign

Post Staff Photos.

Dragon's Escape, Recapture Revealed as Zoo's Ship Sails

Orangutan Chief Casualty of Long Voyage of Storms and Weather Extremes; Freighter Goes to Boston, Due Here Next Week.

By Gerald G. Gross
A Staff Correspondent.

Halifax, Nova Scotia, Sept. 23.—With her decks and half her hatch space filled with some of the strangest creatures in animaldom, the freighter Silverash sailed at 1:45 p. m. today bound for Boston and New York.

Dr. William M. Mann, expedition director, disclosed today that the giant Komodo dragon, which will replace the one that died in Washington Zoo last year, escaped from his crate and was at large in his hatch for several days while the Silverash was steaming westward across the Indian Ocean.

"First thing we did," said Dr. Mann, "was clear all the birds out of the hatch. The brute would have made short shrift of them. But we were too shorthanded to recapture the rascal and the sailors were pretty leary about volunteering—until Jennier and Gaddi came aboard at the next post."

Orangutan Dead.

Most serious mortality of the voyage so far was the death of a big orangutan, which succumbed to dysentery in the Near East. The same outbreak put seven of the ship's officers on the sick list. Two orangutans are still left, however, one of them destined to be Susie's new husband in Washington.

Malcolm Davis, who is in charge of hundreds of rare birds in the ship's aft hatches, told today how he worked in 125-degree temperatures while the freighter was in the Red Sea.

Scheduled to stop briefly in Boston tomorrow and dock in Brooklyn Saturday, the Silverash spent an eventful 24 hours receiving Halifax towns people come aboard to see the deer that bark and the hand-shaking orangutan.

Taxicab drivers, bellhops, Dalhousie University professors and office clerks—all talked today of the animal oddities, whether or not they could pay the collection a personal visit.

Zoo Director Mann was the hero of the local press and the idol of Halifax urchins whose imagination churned with meeting up in the jungle with that Komodo dragon or stalking that pair of black leopards.

Unpronounceable Names.

Many of the specimens are unpronounceable, but that didn't worry this enthusiastic host port. For that matter, how many Washingtonians can identify the nyctobus, the lutang, serow or geur.

Barring unforeseen casualties between here and Washington, the collection will be the biggest and best mass shipment in the Zoo's history. The new tenants will fill the new pachyderm and mammal houses and the bird house addition as well as the older buildings, and probably create a sizable housing problem.

The banana shortage had become acute when our boarding party climbed up the side of the Silverash at the entrance to Halifax Harbor yesterday afternoon. In our motor launch were five bunches of bananas.

When the Silverash showed no signs of slackening speed—Capt. H. Rowe had just picked up the harbor pilot, but he was not expecting a reception party—I stripped the envelope from one of the stalks of bananas and waved a bunch. It worked. The ship's engines were reversed and she came to a dead stop. We clambored aboard.

Accommodations Limited.

The monkeys needed those bananas.

Boarding the vessel here was McFall Kerbey, of the National Geographic Society. Mrs. Malcolm Davis, of Washington, whose husband is in charge of rare birds, was unable to obtain accommodations for the last two legs of the 14,000-mile trip from the East Indies.

Similarly barred, because feverish last-minute cablegrams, telegrams and long-distance phone calls failed to circumvent the vessel's six-passengers-only rule, were the writer, another Washington correspondent and a National Geographic Society photographer. The Silverash will stop for a few hours in Boston tomorrow, arriving at her Staten Island pier in New York Saturday.

Her six passengers, the limit, are Dr. and Mrs. Mann, Roy Jennier, Lyang Gaddi and Davis, all members of the East Indies expedition, and Kerbey.

National Geographic Society and Smithsonian Institution officials yesterday praised Dr. Mann for his success in bringing his cargo through the storms and the sudden temperature changes of the long trip. They were particularly enthusiastic about the work of the "dietitians" in charge of feeding the finicky animals.

Missionary Societies Map 3-Day Program

The missionary societies of the Presbytery of Washington have completed arrangements for an impressive three-day celebration, October 12 to 14, of the founding of foreign missions. Headquarters are the New York Avenue Church.

On the first day, a pageant, "With Cross and Crown in Every Land," by William Chalmers, will be presented, under direction of Bess Davis Schreiner. On Wednesday, a luncheon of 1,000 women will be held at the Mayflower Hotel at 1 p. m. On the last day, a retreat, led by Mrs. Irving W. Ketchum, from 11-12 in the New York Avenue Church, will give opportunity for a great service of thanksgiving and reconsecration of all Presbyterian women for the work yet to be accomplished.

Hit-Run Autoist Cannot Escape, Expert Asserts

Traffic Police Hear Coffey, Chief of U. S. Crime Laboratory.

The hit-and-run driver cannot escape—he is doomed by modern, scientific methods of accident investigation work, said E. P. Coffey, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation crime laboratory, addressing the Maryland University traffic safety school yesterday.

While traffic officer students—among them seven members of the Washington Police Department—took careful notes, Coffey described methods of apprehending traffic criminals through use of infra-red rays, chemicals and other scientific investigation equipment.

A smear of paint, said Coffey, can lead to the arrest and even conviction of highway offenders who attempt to escape by leaving the scene of an accident.

"The fortunate thing about these horrible accidents," said the Federal agent, "is that some clue or bit of evidence is always left behind."

These clues, no matter how insignificant they appear, he declared, should be immediately submitted to the F. B. I. for analysis.

Today, the traffic students will hear Lieut. Franklin M. Hepburn, consultant to the Washington Criminal Justice Association.

Mrs. Wines Dies; Aided Party Work

Mrs. Nellie V. Wines, 42, wife of William E. Wines, died Wednesday at her home, 515 Fourteenth street southeast, after a long illness.

Born in Asheville, N. C., Mrs. Wines had lived in Washington since childhood. She had been employed as telephone operator at the Washington Hotel for 16 years, and recently had worked with the Democratic Committee here.

Besides her husband she leaves three sons, William M., Elmer M. and LeRoy M. Wines, all of Washington, and a brother, James B. Trammell, of Detroit, Mich.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow from the residence with burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Working For Washington.

In every American municipality voluntary associations of citizens have done and are doing notable work in the improvement of local conditions. By keeping an ever-watchful eye on municipal affairs, by agitating for civic development on the one hand and by insisting upon economical administration on the other, by arousing the voters to abuses and by pointing the way of reform, these unofficial bodies have made American cities much better places in which to live.

Nowhere do such citizens' associations perform a more notable task than here in voteless Washington. And this is the more remarkable because the disfranchisement of the District obviously handicaps their efforts. The ordinary means of political expression are closed to the people of Washington. The municipal administration is responsible not to them but to Congress and it is the exceptional member of Congress who can find time to interest himself wholeheartedly in District affairs.

Yet this disheartening situation has not prevented Washington from having more than its fair share of public-spirited individuals and organizations working for the local welfare. Against great odds, they work tenaciously and persistently for the welfare of particular communities within the District and for the city as a whole. They are Washington's unsung heroes.

To make the people of Washington better acquainted with this valiant band The Post is now running, on another page, a series of pen portraits of the men and women who are most active in the field of civic improvement.

Though Washington as a municipality is overshadowed by Washington as the National Capital, it is the former aspect of the city which more vitally and more directly impinges on the lives and welfare of those who live here. Most of the leaders described in "Working for Washington" are not famous as national headliners. But their service to this community is not less notable because of that.

A Senate Responsibility.

Attorney General Cummings very properly resents the suggestion that the Department of Justice should have investigated Senator Black's qualifications for the position of Supreme Court justice either before or after confirmation. He says, indeed, that it would have been an "act of impertinence" to investigate the private life of a man "associated for years with the members of the Senate."

There is a good reason why the Department of Justice customarily holds aloof from inquiries of this sort. There is another and a more suitable method of determining the fitness of an appointee for high judicial office. The Senate and the Senate alone, apart from the President who makes the appointments, is charged with responsibility for deciding whether a candidate deserves to be confirmed.

Moreover, a departmental inquiry would inevitably tend to become a sort of intrusive probe into a man's private affairs. It could not be as discriminating or as informal as an investigation conducted by Senators simply for their own information and guidance. Senators are in an exceptionally good position to separate relevant from irrelevant facts, and, with their political experience, they should be good judges of character. But instead of doing their duty, in the present instance, by running down the charges and rumors that connected their colleague with the Klan, the Senators took refuge in a rule of Senatorial courtesy and voted for confirmation without weighing the evidence.

Various members of the upper chamber did indeed serve warning that the failure of the Judiciary Committee to hold open hearings, or even ask Senator Black to go publicly on record as to whether he had affiliations with the Klan, might have most unexpected and unhappy consequences. So no Senator who voted for the nominee can expect to be believed if he professes to be shocked at the recent revelations. If there was deception, it was self-deception; the suppression of pertinent information was the result of unwillingness to be enlightened.

Whether out of a misguided regard for a traditional observance of courtesy to colleagues or simply because of weariness at the end of an exhausting session, the Senate disregarded its responsibility to the American people when it voted to confirm an appointee to the highest court of the land in face of charges that clearly called for investigation.

The Nine Power Treaty.

At Washington, on February 6, 1922, China and eight other powers, including Japan and the United States, signed an agreement designed to "stabilize conditions in the Far East, to safeguard the rights and interests of China, and to promote intercourse between China and the other powers upon the basis of equality of opportunity."

Beginning in the fall of 1931 and at intervals since then, with the climax reached in the present undeclared war, Japan has acted in utter disregard of that treaty. On at least five counts her government stands condemned before the bar of world public opinion as a nation which has been faithless to solemn obligations which, here in Washington, were voluntarily undertaken.

Japan has failed to "respect the sovereignty, the independence, and the territorial and administrative integrity of China." She has refused to "provide the fullest and most unembarrassed opportunity to China to develop and maintain for herself an effective and stable government." In areas under her control, Japan has shut the open door which all nine powers were pledged to keep open. She has not refrained from "taking advantage of conditions in China in order to seek special rights or privileges which would abridge the rights of subjects or citizens of friendly states." And, finally, she has flouted this treaty by creating special Japanese spheres of influence.

But Japan's course does not release any of the other signatories of the Nine Power pact from their obligations. It is apparent that with the exception of China, now resisting Japan's encroachments to the best of her ability, the other signatories are in no mood to oppose Japan by force. They are eager to avoid war as long as it is at all possible to do so. But at the same time they are becoming increasingly aware that Japan's policies in the Far East threaten not only the interests and security of China but also the interests and security of all other nations with a stake in the Far East.

Acting alone, not even so rich and powerful a nation as the United States is in a position to uphold the Nine Power Treaty. But together the signatories of the Nine Power Treaty constitute too formidable an aggregation for Japan permanently to ignore. It is, therefore, significant that, as the State Department has revealed, the signatories of the 1922 pact are now in constant consultation with each other. It is a form of co-operation definitely called for under Article VII of that treaty.

So far as the United States is concerned the application of Article VII of the Nine Power Treaty is further evidence of this Nation's unwillingness to pursue a policy of scuttle and run. And it should remove from the field of possibilities any application of the neutrality act to this war. In conflict with the obligations of a treaty that legislation becomes inoperative.

To Fight Infantile Paralysis.

Under President Roosevelt's personal sponsorship a new national foundation to fight infantile paralysis is now being created. It is a particularly timely move. For the week ended September 18, according to the Public Health Service, no fewer than 879 new cases were reported, a peak for the year. And while cool weather seems always to slow the attack of the disease it will not alter the fact that so far this year the number of victims has been nearly three times that for the same period in 1936.

Fortunately, science is now very much better equipped to fight infantile paralysis than it has ever been before. Much research into the cause and treatment of the disease has been brought to a successful conclusion of late. And nobody has done more than President Roosevelt himself to arouse public opinion in behalf of the pitiful victims and to aid them to regain the use of their limbs. The work of the Warm Springs Foundation, which Mr. Roosevelt has headed during the last decade, has steadily grown in scope and usefulness.

But the fight is far from won, as the current prevalence of poliomyelitis indicates. Study of the prevention, treatment and cure of the disease has not been adequately coordinated. To fill the want of a central directing agency the new foundation has been created. As the President pointed out in his statement from Hyde Park, "the time has now arrived when the whole attack on this plague should be led and directed, though not controlled, by one national body."

There can be no doubt whatever that under Mr. Roosevelt's inspiring leadership the people of the Nation will rally in support of so useful an agency, devoted to so noble a cause.

Short Cut To Chic.

Cut it up, push it up, tuck it up, tie it up. In other words, coiffures are following skirts and both are being yanked higher than they have been in years. No more sausage curls, no more shoulder-sweeping ringlets; no more page-boy effects. Just a good, clean cut with the old hairline unashamedly showing will be seen this fall. That is, if the ladies follow the predictions of the American Hair Design Institute.

Hair-do hasn't undergone so drastic a change since the beautiful and damned postwar generation cut their hair and were transformed into flappers. Chignons became only the waste on the barber shop floor. Towering hats wouldn't balance on such scanty foundations, so they were hauled down and converted into cloches. Hair nets and hatpins went the way of meatless Tuesdays. Suddenly the little tailor-maids decided to experiment with glamour and almost overnight ears, necks and shoulders were hidden with long locks. Then came the Windsors.

The American Hair Design Institute doesn't credit the duchess with bringing the back of the neck out of hiding, but everything points to it. Ever since the former Mrs. Simpson hit the front pages the feminine portion of a hundred million guinea pigs have been experimenting with the center part.

All in all, the new and neater coiffure a la Wally seems to have it all over the old cocker spaniel effect. But it is to be hoped that emulation of the duchess stops right there. For only this week newspaper pictures show her honeymooning in high shoes!

The Good Society.

There is published today a book which, by every criterion of intrinsic worth, social importance and appositeness to current problems, seems destined to make a permanent impression upon American thinking.

The praise is high. Our history records very little political writing of which this could be said with a confidence justified in the event. But Walter Lippmann's study of "The Good Society" is clearly stamped with a triple hallmark which promises endurance. It is carefully thought out. It is clearly expressed. It will at first arouse, and will ultimately triumph over, a storm of partisan criticism.

In "The Good Society" Mr. Lippmann has addressed himself to an analysis of liberalism, using that much-abused word in its authentic sense of a doctrine which is opposed to coercive authority, whether public or private, and which believes profoundly in the Golden Rule. He has made a plea, always logical and sometimes profoundly moving, for resistance by mankind, and particularly for resistance by Americans, to the many contemporary forces at variance with that philosophy.

The interest of this study is perhaps best indicated by the fact that while many will applaud much that is in it, few will approve it all.

With dispassionate, even-handed argument Mr. Lippmann first dismisses collectivists of every type as being fundamentally akin in their ruthless enmity to liberalism. He shows, what many already realize, that the Nazi, the Fascist and the Communist are brothers under their superficial differences, alike dedicated to the coercion rather than the emancipation of the individual. And he proves this with a wealth of evidence which will be singularly disconcerting to Socialists of every type.

This shrewd political analyst is equally merciless in his dissection of "the gradual collectivist," in whom quite a number of present-day Washingtonians are likely to recognize themselves. From the viewpoint of the authentic liberal, he shows, the state Socialism of the New Deal is less an obvious danger, but therefore rather more insidious, than the brands of complete collectivism now operating in Germany, Italy and Russia.

And then Mr. Lippmann turns, to strike with equally slashing indictment at those who in the past sold out the doctrine of liberalism so that it became "a collection of querulous shibboleths invoked by property owners when they resisted encroachments on their vested interests."

Here it will be the turn of the Liberty League and the Union League to squirm. Here those who have nodded approvingly at the earlier chapters will begin to grow choleric. And here the radicals, or those of them with sufficient tolerance to get that far, will wax enthusiastic.

"The Good Society" is perhaps too detached, too thoughtful, too truly liberal in its thinking to make much headway in a world as torn by dissension, prejudice and increasing bitterness as is the case in A. D. 1937. But for Americans, who are still allowed to see "the polestar which men have followed in their ascent from barbarism," the message in Mr. Lippmann's book is vital.

He has produced the study called for by the turbulence and confusion of the times. He has accomplished a piece of brilliant political research which will rank with the best this country has produced.

Note to Uncle Sam: It isn't the hungriest pig that squeals the loudest—it's the one you pull away from the feed-trough.

A New Jersey man over whose head a loaded brewery truck ran, reports no ill effects. A plausible assumption is that the truck was loaded with light wines.

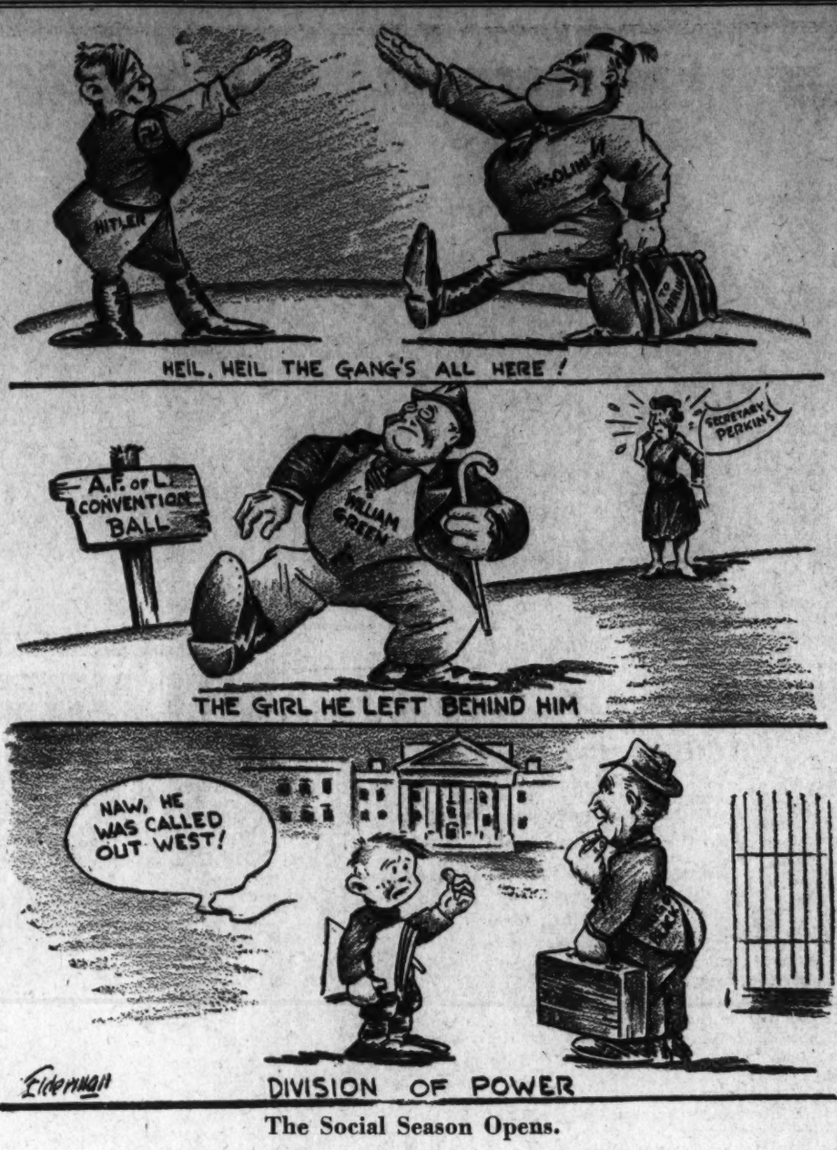
A Colorado woman is suing her husband for divorce because he shot at her seven times. Some women are peculiar like that—strangely prejudiced against being shot at.

Dream Of Humane Warfare.

From the Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

What may seem a wholly fantastic dream of putting an entire army out of commission without the shedding of blood by the use of a drug, encased in explosive shells, that would inflict only slight skin wounds with their fragments is beyond doubt the reaction of the human mind to the horrors of war now occupying so great a space in the news of the day. At all events, the results of experiments, looking toward the conduct of war on a humane basis, as laid before the recent session of the American Chemical Society at Rochester, is of absorbing interest, even though its practical application would seem to the lay mind to be almost impossible.

If there must be warfare—a conclusion that a large part of the civilized world has begun to doubt—certainly a drug that would, when fired in "scatter shells," throw an army into a faint from which it could be revived after being captured, would be infinitely preferable to the present shells that leave whole armies in fragments from which they never can be revived. A drug that would make war humane may be only a dream, but a world that is half mad with hostilities now would be better off if it had a few more such dreams.



The Social Season Opens.

In Defense Of Justice Black

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The appointment of Senator Hugo Black to the Supreme Bench, has aroused such a storm of adverse criticism, because of his alleged affiliations with the Klan, that a visitor from some strange world, unacquainted with American history would think that this country was not only the seat of highest culture, but that its professed democracy was one of unqualified brotherhood and humanity.

If there are people who believe that even among the most cultivated university groups of our country there is no racial antipathy to the Jew, let them read the great American classic—Ludwig Lewisohn's "Up Stream" and stand convinced.

Everybody knows that one of the strongest traditions of American political life has been that a Roman Catholic could never rise to the Presidency of the United States.

In the political campaign of 1928 when Alfred E. Smith, a Roman Catholic, was running for President on the Democratic ticket, it was stated that "our whole Puritan civilization would be endangered by his election." In that campaign the charge was made that the Republican campaign management openly financed the political activities of the Klan and other anti-Roman Catholic organizations.

Of course Mr. Hoover, the Republican candidate, was too unsophisticated to know anything about the flames of intolerance and religious bigotry, kindled into a veritable conflagration, of which he became the beneficiary.

So far as the colored group is concerned, the validity of their citizenship has been successfully assaulted from a thousand directions—the War Amendments nullified by both political action and judicial decision, and the great Civil Rights Bill relegated to the Limbo of forgotten things by the Supreme Court of the United States, whose action meant that Charles Sumner, Roscoe Conkling and Thaddeus Stevens were mentally too decrepit to know what they were doing when they sponsored the measure.

THOMAS H. R. CLARKE.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some of our learned men in Congress are already talking impeachment in the Black-Klan controversy. That some of these men are misleading their colleagues as well as the people whom they represent, is quite evident.

The issue at stake is not whether Justice Black still belongs to the Klan or not. His progressivism does not follow the Klan ideology: Therefore, the issue seems to be whether Justice Black repudiates his affiliation and denounces the Klan or whether he is still in sympathy with them.

When newspapers such as those that are pro-Klan start yelling for Black's resignation, then we can smell a rat somewhere.

Justice Black has done much to offset his Klan affiliation (if it existed) by a record of liberal and progressive championship.

It remains for Justice Black to denounce the Klan and let the nation know where he stands. Most everyone in the South was a Ku Kluxer when Black was reported to have joined. His views may have changed. It remains for Black to denounce the Klan or give up the seat and he must answer now.

MORRIS PEARLMUTTER.
Washington, Sept. 21.

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: While I am not a member of the much talked of Ku Klux Klan, I was some years ago a member of the Christian Education Commission of the M. E. C. S. and in that position I was asked many questions in regard to the Klan. Now, in order to meet these questions I made some investigations to obtain the truth and object of this order, and my recollections are about these.

First, the K. K. K. was organized and incorporated as any bank or business is incorporated under the laws of the United States. And any white man who is native born and is a true and loyal citizen of the United States, who believes in the Christian religion regardless of denomination or, if he does not belong to any church, believes in Jesus Christ, and in the maintenance of the supremacy of the white race, was eligible to membership in this order. To my knowledge all kinds of businessmen, lawyers, doctors, ministers of different denominations, joined this organization as an honor.

I have been prompted to give this brief explanation because I have been reading so much bunk in the papers about the Ku Klux Klan and Justice Black's appointment to the Supreme Court that I have become disgusted with such rot.

Suppose Justice Black was, or is now, a member of the Ku Klux Klan. Will someone who has intelligent knowledge of the Klan's plan of the principles of pure Americanism tell your readers in what way Justice Black will be disqualified to serve his country as a justice of the Supreme Court? Please remember we have other so-called secret orders. Will any one say that being a member of any of these orders disqualifies them from holding public office?

STRAIGHT SHOOTER.
Washington, Sept. 20.

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: It seems to me to smack of the Dark Ages to hound a person for follies he may have committed in his youth, unless those follies were viciously criminal. Could one, by any stretch of the imagination, call affiliation with the Klan that?

I know little or nothing of the Klan of today. I have heard plenty about the original Klan from old people who were in a position to know. The Klan, I understood, was organized to combat or control the activities of the carpetbaggers, which, as everybody knows, were a vicious menace to the South. No dissertation on that subject is necessary.

I remember the Grand Dragon of the Klan in our small town after the Civil War. He belonged to one of the best families of that section. Although the appellation of rabid rebel was fastened upon him, altogether sneeringly, he fended it off with laughing, boyish exuberance and left the interviewing committee whistling "Yankee Doodle."

Always, to me, he was a glamorous figure of large romantic proportion. Six foot some inches height, broad of shoulder, slim of waist, a jolly-devil-may-care smile showing strong, even white teeth, a face deep tanned by sun and wind, sleepy, steel gray eyes that would open wide and grow black when occasion offered special interest.

I thought the Smithsonian had the monopoly of unearthing and assembling old bones.

S. VINCENT.
Washington, Sept. 16.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The reactionary, antisocial, un-American cliques of this Nation are wailing and gnashing their teeth over the alleged fact that Justice Hugo Black is a member of the Ku Klux Klan. The average American citizen will never be sufficiently gullible to swallow such bold and stark hypocrisy. The Klan issue is a sham and pretense under which the enemies of economic liberty dastardly wage war on the most sincere and courageous liberal of the South.

Black's record in the Senate is without blemish. He has consistently catered to the common people instead of the slave drivers and skinflints. This progressive record is the sole cause of the recent hysteria over Black's appointment to the Supreme Court. The reactionaries deem Black a dangerous man because they have not the slightest hope that he will be converted to a medieval social philosophy after reaching the bench.

If Black at present were loyal and devoted to the bigoted chauvinistic anti-progressive principles of the Klan, the same ultra-conservative elements of this country who are now so vigorously smirching him would be hailing his appointment to the Supreme Court as a victory of Americanism.

Civil liberty and economic liberty are supplements of complete and genuine freedom. The Supreme Court has always been an arch-enemy of economic liberty, and has never been overzealous in protecting civil liberty. Hugo Black is a friend of economic liberty and is growing in grace as to civil liberty.

HOWARD CARWILE.
Madisonville, Va., Sept. 19.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If I say that "Aristotle" regards himself as a philosopher it is quite different from saying "he is a philosopher."

When I wrote in The Post that the Klan "at least, regards itself as American" it was something else, again, than the statement carelessly credited to me by our latter day Aristotle, in your issue of the twenty-first.

The robe of anonymity is quite as revealing as the Klansman's pillow case. Your correspondent's lugubrious vaporings (which just won't condense!) would be as innocent if subscribed with any other of his pseudonyms.

When our harried editor prudently wielded the blue pencil against a considerable portion of my condemned epistle there was lost to the reading public a truculent sentiment that would really have intrigued our tolerant critic.

Would you suppose, Aristotle, that the dark plot is darkly intended to revivify the Klan? That is the net result, already materializing. And the goblins'll git you if you don't watch out!

THOMAS ECKLOFF.
Washington, Sept. 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a very old Book a story is told of a problem brought before a very wise man for him to solve.

A woman was dragged before him accused of a crime for which death by stoning was the penalty.

After a few minutes deliberation the wise man said to her accusers, "Let him who is without sin cast the first stone."

It is wondered, if the problem which seems to have excited the righteous (?) wrath of some, were placed before this wise man if he would decide as he did in the case of the woman, "Let him who is without sin cast the first stone."

The suggestion is made in connection with the attack on Mr. Justice Black. ENQUIRER.
Washington, Sept. 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The much ado about Associate Black's alleged affiliation with the K. K. K. is bound to bring widespread repercussions. Many of his enemies, in their persecution of him, are outdoing even the worst fanaticism ascribed to the hooded order. Certainly, their hands as they approach the court of public opinion are anything but clean. Never in my experience have I seen a more graphic violation of the Biblical injunction, "Judge not, that ye be not judged," than in the vicious attack on Black.

Some of the wiser of them are beginning to sense the recoiling effect of their venom and are gradually relenting, or, at least, stepping into the shaded part of the picture. It is well for them and the country that they should. Millions of laboring people are silently for Black. They know, as was stated by Mr. Edward Keating in a recent address before a labor meeting, that Black championed their cause in Congress when no other liberal in the Senate was willing to assume such leadership. They are not being fooled as to the reasons for the violent attack upon their friend.

Industrial upheavals and religious antipathies often go hand-in-hand in revolutions. One flame of passion feeds the other. Roman Catholicism is again playing a higher and more open hand in American and world policies than usual. Common sense, therefore, dictates that those who are playing with Rome and the predatory interests—both Fascistic—cease their attack on Black if they would not precipitate a revolution in this country similar to that in Spain.

The causes which produced the Klan and present economic unrest are smoldering in the breasts of millions of real Americans. All that is needed to light the fires of revolt is a continuation of this senseless persecution of Black.

Bar Republica.

THOSE April days it was pleasant to sit at a table in front of Bar Republica, across the street from the Church of Our Lady, on the corner.

It was twilight for the Kingdom of Spain. Alfonso had not yet fled to England. So Bar Republica was merely a name to be whispered. The sign over the door still said Bar Touristes.

But there was electricity in the air, and unrest on the narrow, twisting side streets of the fishing village of Soller, on the east coast of Mallorca. You felt it, whether you sat in front of Bar Republica or strolled in the hazy morning toward the bull ring, which was used only at fiesta time. You sensed a trap was about to be sprung, that from it would step a new and democratic Spain.

Inside Bar Republica, where morning sunbeams fenced across a painted Don Quixote, glasses clicked over tables. Voices were low. Usually a civil guard stood nearby, dazzling and immaculate in his glittering black hat and scarlet cape. Head down, he seemed to notice nothing.

"But he notices everything, amigo, everything," confided Julio, proprietor of Bar Republica, as he brought wine.

"Listen, amigo, I am a Spaniard. In Spain everyone is afraid of the civil guards except the very righteous. Believe me, amigo, when a thief sees a civil guard, he crosses himself. They are the best shots in Spain."

Into Bar Republica the fishermen came to drink. Here they met the farmers and the merchants and the other tavern keepers. Tourists, what few there were, dropped in as the day wore on, and sat by themselves. There was an enormous fat man, with one eye, who had lived in Soller for years. He was reputed to be a prince of Egypt, exiled from his native land. He wore a black monocle and sometimes was accompanied by a tired, frail English woman. He was popular as a semi-stranger could be, for he often bought drinks for the house.

In the market place beshawled women sold devil fish and lobsters and peanuts and candies that grew warm and sticky in the April heat. Ox carts rattled by over the cobblestones and sleek cats basked in diluted sunlight that filtered onto partially-shaded doorsteps.

"A cat is individualistic, like a republic should be," Julio whispered as he thrust his hand into an upper shelf, through cobwebs, for an ancient bottle of whisky a British customer wanted.

Those were days long ago. It would be five years before Italians and Carlists would take over Soller. It would be five years before Franco's guns would rain death and ruin on beautiful Madrid, far away on the Castilian plateau.

It was an era of democracy. Half a decade would pass before Bar Republica would be crowded with the mercenaries of a foreign land, before Moors would stretch their legs beneath its rickety tables, and the occasional tourists who made Julio's eyes spakle would be no more.

Spain, as the kingdom fell and the republic came, was a country of cats and crosses, of lotteries and bullfights, of water wheels and senoritas in mantillas, who moved with a swinging gait through the streets.

The vineyards were unburned by powder. The wheat rustled in the fields beneath a benign sun. Over the rocky roads patient oxen pulled carts, occasionally prodded by the proud peasants who drove them.

"We are a peaceful people," Julio said often.

"You criticize the bullfight? What do you Anglo-Saxons do? You take your fine bulls to the slaughter house and they die without a chance. We give them glory. If two toreadors cannot kill them, they go back to Andalusia. And silver bells are placed around their necks and they never fight again.

"They are strong before they enter the arena. I have seen a young bull charge a locomotive in Andalusia."

Soller did not hear about the success of the first revolution until the morning after Alphonso had left his palace and was safely across the border. It still was whispering when the republic had been proclaimed in Madrid and the crowds were parading down Gran Via.

Twelve hours later, in the hazy spring, a new flag fluttered from Bar Republica. There was singing inside and singing in the streets. The sign which said Bar Touristes had come down. Voices chanted the "Marseillaise."

"Look, amigo," shouted Julio, "a new flag—the flag of the republic. Alfonso has fled to England. The civil guards would not shoot their own people. A toast in my best diamonte. Salud a la Republica!"

That night there was a fiesta. A fair opened opposite Bar Republica, next to the Church of Our Lady, on the corner. On the backs of wooden horses rode the happy children. They were the conquistadores of the new regime. The fishermen drank long and late and guitars sang in the streets.

Just before dawn the citizens of the new republic rolled away in their wagons and trod away on foot over the white roads of old Spain—white as lanes of tallow from the melted candles on a birthday cake!

Isms In America.

THAT WAS A pretty good speech by Harry Colmery, the retiring commander of the American Legion, especially where he gave the Nazis the rough side of his tongue and loaded Nazi, Fascist and Communist all together on the same boat outward bound.

I understand that the Legion condemned naziism and fascism along with communism in last year's convention, but for some reason—perhaps because we all had grown used to hearing the Legionnaires resolute against bolshevism alone, as though it were the only dangerous ism in the land—the triple nature of the 1936 resolution was not as widely known as it should have been.

In fact, these dispatches booted one at the time in a high-powered piece saying that if the Legion had been really on its toes to guard the American democracy it would have included naziism and fascism, too. In answer to that, Colmery—I am pretty sure it was Colmery, although the letter is gone now—wrote to say, in round numbers, that anyone with a license to smear up good white paper six days a week ought to take the trouble to inform himself before popping off.

• • • •

WELL, ANYWAY, this time everybody heard the retiring commander, and he didn't chew his words.

"We stand committed to oppose not merely one alien ism, but all such forces," said he.

"Now we hear from beyond the sea that the German government claims the right and intends to organize Nazi groups in our country to preach and propagandize naziism here, that it will not tolerate any interference with that policy and that its purpose is to save us from communism. What a brazen affront!

"The American people have a right to go communistic if they want to, although the Legion will oppose that to the finish, as it has a right to do. We have the right to have whatever form of government and follow whatever political philosophy we think best for us. That is our business, and it isn't the business of any other government or any other people. We have a right to protect our system, to declare that there will be no naziism nor Nazi demonstrations, and either to bar from entry into this country or send out of it those who preach or practice it."

A legalistic lint-picker might challenge that last part as a potential denial of freedom of speech, but you can't expect an organization of former soldiers to extend that freedom to cover harangues against their form of government, remembering that oratory may be the barrage to soften up the country for the attack.

I STILL INSIST that communism is no great danger in this country, because, while we are not a very church-going people, as our parsons constantly remind us, one sure way to rile us up is to go around knocking God and religion as the Communists constantly do.

Moreover, from the early days of bolshevism in Russia there is a hangover notion about making women common property, and the mere mention of communism to George Spelvin, the average American, is enough to make him reach for the ball bat, the bread knife or the old sixer in the bureau and stand to the door of his own little love bower to protect his helpmate, his daughters, mother, sisters and all.

But up to now we have been shoving them back on two fronts in the belief that communism was one sort of menace and naziism and fascism were another. Gradually now we are moving them around to one front where they belong, for there is no practical difference between the two elements and the pretended differences are diminishing every day as the Communists go more and more Nazi and Hitler goes more and more communistic.

His latest was a threat to nationalize big business in Germany if it couldn't maintain the pace of preparation for his big war, and we know our economic royalists, Bourbons, or whatever you want to call them, wouldn't care for any of those apples.

Now we had better study up on fascism so we can recognize it when it pretends to be patriotism, because it has a knack for protective coloration which may deceive the most earnest, honest and loyal defender of democracy. The Klux, the vigilantes of all kinds, and a large variety of citizens' protective leagues are good samples of the stuff that fascism is made of.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Positively No Knocking.

("Berlin.—Any slurring remarks against Hitler or any Nazi official even in the privacy of one's family is now illegal. Criticism of Nazi leaders or aims around the coffee tables is also prohibited. The only exception is in soliloquizing or making comments in a personal diary."—Dispatch.)

I cannot tell my family
That Hitler is a little off;
When mommer listens I must not
At any Nazi leader scoff.

Within my children's hearing I
Must never knock a public man,
Or criticize in any way
The latest governmental plan.

When we have people in for lunch
No sly aspersions may I cast,
Or whisper of Der Fuehrer. "Say,
I wonder just how long he'll last?"

Around a table in an inn
All cracks like that are quite taboo;
I mustn't say, "In confidence
I think that Adolf's nerts; do you?"

Around the office or the shop
I must behave as in the house,
And never chuckle at the name
Of Goering, and say softly, "Raus!"

When I am sitting at the lodge,
Enjoying possibly some schnapps,
I musn't by one word admit
I do not think that Adolf's tops.

To "What did you think of that speech?"
I musn't say, "Ach Gott! How punk!"
"A masterpiece!" I must declare
If I would not be quickly sunk.

To "Goebbells is a genius, yah?"
I must assent, "You said it, boy!"
I may not mean it, but I know
In prison I would find no joy.

When my good frau cries, "Food is high—
It's awful how the prices leap!"
I must say, "Shush! We never knew
A time when living was so cheap!"

• • • • •

But, boy, I have an outlet grand—
I can soliloquize, you see . . .
And, oh, the dirty cracks I make
When I talk quietly to ME!

The German Church

Nazi Efforts To Capture Citadels of German Protestantism Making Little Headway, Observer Finds After Survey.

By Dr. Ewart Edmund Turner.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Editor's note—Dr. Ewart Edmund Turner, former pastor of the American Church in Berlin, has just returned from a tour of investigation throughout the Third Reich. He interviewed numerous Protestant and Catholic church officials and Jewish leaders, attended trials against clergymen and kept his ear to the ground generally. Dr. Turner presents his conclusions in a series of four articles of which this is the first. Dr. Turner is known throughout America as a keen student of German conditions. He occupied the pulpit of the American Church in Berlin just at the time Hitler came to power.

THE EVANGELICAL Church of Germany is planning to call a national confessional synod to clarify the issues of the struggle between church and state. A Lutheran bishop proposed the holding of such a national synod; the idea has met with wide approval throughout the confessional church. Lutherans are traditionally opposed to synods as savoring too much of Calvinism. The fact that a Lutheran bishop himself suggests the term synod points to a renewed unity within German Protestantism.

It will be the purpose of this National Confessional Synod to define Christian faith, to define the terms on which Christians can remain loyal to a state, and to issue a solemn warning to National Socialism against interfering with church doctrine and organization. A kind of final appeal will be made to the Third Reich to relinquish its self-appointed guardianship of the total mind and soul of German youth. Nothing less than Christianity must come first in the character development of a nation's youth. The synod will be held even if forbidden.

The determination to hold such a confessional synod marks a new stage in the rapid march of events in Germany. Catholics and Protestants alike anticipated a National Socialism on the order of Italian Fascism, with the state leaving room for the church. But Hitler has gone further than Mussolini and has demanded complete allegiance to a new racial world-view. The stiffening of the Protestant resistance this summer is a sign that wide sections of the church feel that National Socialism has betrayed the millions of Christians who voted Hitler into power.

Nazi Church Meets With Little Favor.

THERE ARE 18,000 pastors in the German Evangelical Church. Of these less than 2,000 now align themselves with the radical German Christians, the group that wants to national-socialize Christianity. Martin Niemoeller's oppositional movement now embraces 5,000 pastors, who resist the state when it invades the territory of life philosophy and church organizational freedom.

Another 6,000 pastors are moderates who feel that the state will allow a future for orthodox Christianity; but if the state further endangers Christianity they will cast in their lot with the 5,000 pastors around Niemoeller. Those 6,000 moderates include most of the pastors in the Lutheran provincial churches of Bavaria, Wurtemberg, and Hanover. In these provinces the church governments are still "intact," the Nazi party not having ejected the legal church officials as has been done throughout Prussia.

Together, the 5,000 oppositional pastors and the 6,000 moderates constitute the Confessional Church: 11,000 pastors who stand firmly on historic Christian faith, determined to resist to death any move to alter or remove Christian doctrine. The remaining pastors are either indifferent or are timid, fearing for their security. It is believed, however, that the majority of these neutral pastors will side with the orthodox Christians rather than the semi-pagan German Christians when the final showdown comes.

How long will the church struggle last? Probably it will absorb the next quarter of a century in the national life of Germany. It took a keen statesman like Bismarck ten years (1873-1883) to discover that the power of one branch of the Christian Church could not be broken. And at that time there was not the mass hysteria which today characterizes so much of continental European mentality; Germany in Bismarck's day was prosperous and had just won a war. If Hitler decides to continue the present attempt to break the spiritual power of both branches of Christianity it will involve Germany in internal conflict far worse than under the republic.

Niemoeller Still Being Kept in Jail.

MARTIN NIEMOELLER, sitting in jail since July 1, illustrates the perplexity and embarrassment of the Nazis in view of the church resistance. If they keep him in jail his influence as a martyr gathers momentum with every added day of incarceration. Indeed, the arrest of the former submarine-commander pastor has so aroused the lay membership that a group of confessional leaders feels that Niemoeller's influence has been greater during the last two months than ever before.

In various parts of Germany I was quoted the words which Hitler entered in the Prisoner's Book at the Fortress Landsberg while he was serving a sentence in 1924. Hitler wrote these words in a bold hand: "When the freedom of a nation is betrayed then the best men will be sitting in jail."

On the other hand, to release Niemoeller will unleash once more his fiery, factual attacks on the efforts of the Nazi extremists to undermine Christianity. A member of war-hero Niemoeller's parish in Dahlem-Berlin told me that when their pastor is released he will be given a welcome back seldom witnessed in Germany. "Imagine this parish when we hear him again preaching from his pulpit," said this parishioner.

One month after his imprisonment Niemoeller was approached with an offer of freedom. The reason this offer was made was that the state prosecution had within two weeks lost three spectacular trials against accused churchmen. In Berlin, Jacobi and Dibelius were cleared by the special courts, even though Hitler's minister for church affairs appeared with his staff to testify against Dibelius; it is the first time in Nazi history that a cabinet member and his staff took the witness stand against an individual, and the case was hopelessly lost.

In Bavaria the Nazi radicals had been unable to win a sensational trial against Rupert Mayer, the Catholic Niemoeller. Having been thrice defeated, the Nazi radicals did not dare risk the collapse of the long-heralded trial against Niemoeller. So he was offered his freedom—on one condition. That condition was that he promise to lead no more crusades in public against those he termed "the enemies of Christianity." Niemoeller refused freedom on these conditions, replying that when he was released he would continue to "torpedo the enemy's boats" as long as an enemy existed.

Church Leaders Loyal to State.

IT IS CERTAIN that if it were announced that Niemoeller had "hanged himself" in jail not 20 people in all Germany would believe it. But the question "What to do with Niemoeller?" is only the introduction to the larger question, "What to do with the Christian Church?" In the meantime Niemoeller is in high spirits in the Moabit jail; he sent out word to his friends that he has put on 5 pounds and that he has never had time till now to catch up on his reading.

During July and August I interviewed leaders and the rank and file of the Confessional Church in various parts of Germany. All of them sought to impress on me their earnest desire to remain loyal to the state. The vast majority welcomed the rise of Hitler and credit him with enormous service to the Fatherland in abolishing unemployment, removing the Versailles Treaty, restoring German morale and uniting the country politically. Had the revolution been accomplished without introducing a pagan secular philosophy and without minority groups wrecking the church organization and creed, the German church would be marching in step with National Socialism as Catholicism does with Italian Fascism.

This coming winter will see confessional churchmen opening a broad offensive of a dual nature; negatively, against the increasing state interference and, positively, in the proclamation of the gospel. If decrees and prohibitions are leveled against them they will ignore these, quoting the words of Peter which have become a church slogan in Germany, "We must obey God rather than man."

I return from Germany this year feeling that Christianity and National Socialism are both more firmly rooted in the nation than in any previous year. The Christian Church is braced; it senses where the issues lie.

Book Bargains?

By Bett Hooper

Modern Age, Inc.

Miss Bett Hooper, Book Editor,
The Washington Post,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Miss Hooper:

I have a book problem which, while personal to me, has probably faced many readers in Washington and which, if enough interest and thought can be brought to bear on it, can probably be solved, at least partly. The problem is how can a reader of fiction obtain books without paying the publisher's price for them, since this is impossible for so many or us? Two courses are open, and I have found both of them to be highly unsatisfactory.

First, there is the Free Public Library. But fiction is not reserved at the library. If you want a book you must take your chances of finding it on the shelves. If you want a classic, or any book published several years ago, you have little chance of getting it; lending libraries don't carry them, and you can't reserve them at the Public Library.

Second, there are the numerous circulating or lending libraries. If you can afford 2 or 3 cents a day you have a chance of reading current fiction. Classics and older books are not carried. I remember the tremendous amount of trouble I had getting "The Way of All Flesh;" took me three weeks even to find a library that carried it. I had to wait then for two weeks to get it.

Can you help a poor fiction reader?

(Signed) FRANK FORD BURNET.

Dear Mr. Burnet:

You are, indeed, not alone with your problem, and I feel strongly that sooner or later publishers are going to have to recognize it and do something about it. In a few European countries, particularly France, publishers have for a number of years been getting out paper-bound books on the same price scale as magazines. Their theory is that the books may be discarded after reading, as are periodicals, or, if desired, bound and preserved. Over here we have been slower to adopt this plan, but there are, as you probably know, several publishers who are trying it with no little success.

Some time ago Albert and Charles Boni flooded the country with paper books. In 1930 some New York publishers announced that they were contemplating first class fiction and non-fiction in editions of $1 and $1.50. In May of this year Simon & Shuster issued a bumper edition of "The Outward Room" to sell at the nominal sum of $1.25 each. Eleanor Green's "Pastorale," which I consider one of the most beautifully written books of the year, retailed for $1.75. But even these prices are considerably above that of the average magazine, and, as such, are also considerably beyond the pocketbooks of most of us.

But the outlook is not really as black as we might think. Only this week the postman delivered a neat blue box of books to me containing eight paper-bound volumes, and the lot of them only amount to $2.40. The subjects range from tales for tiny tots to "Men Who Lead Labor." There is also a murder mystery slipped in, a love story, a comprehensive commentary of the European situation by Kaltenborn and, as if this were not enough, there's a compilation of letters from witnesses of the Spanish slaughter.

One can almost imagine the Modern Age publishers sitting back and inquiring, "What more can anyone ask?" I'm sorry to have to say that the answer to that is—quality.

It's only fair, of course, to give any new venture the benefit of the doubt. But this first batch of books, Mr. Burnet, would not be the answer to a fiction reader's prayer by anybody's yardstick. "All's Fair," by Richard Wormser, and "Old Hell," by Emmett Gowen, are the only two in this group which come under the head of fiction. The first is an insipid, tapioca type of boy-meets-girl story which I doubt the author would have been able to peddle to a first-class slick magazine. The second purports to be a junior edition of "Tobacco Road" but, like so many namesakes, it doesn't pack its pappy's wallop.

In other words, if I had a quarter and wanted to settle down to a long, hard evening's reading, I'd rather go to the newsstand down the street and buy a copy of Story. Why, with a quarter I could buy a Saturday Evening Post, a Collier's, and have 15 cents left for a chocolate milk shake. In fact, after looking at these two books carefully, I've decided I'd rather just save and save until I have scrimped up $2.50 and can buy a book I really want. Which leaves me, or anybody who loves good fiction, exactly where I was before Modern Age had their Big Idea.

But this is pure carping and puts me in the class with fathers who get a little sick when they take that first peek at their new-born. At this stage Modern Age fiction is still a rather red baby with doubled-up, ineffectual fists. Only time will tell whether it's a "blessed event" or a darned nuisance around the house. (Signed) BETT HOOPER.

• • • •

P. S. I hope you will understand, Mr. Burnet, that this does not apply to the non-fiction in this group of Modern Age books. It appears to be timely, well written and exceedingly interesting. B. H.

Victoria Regina

By William Lyon Phelps

Played In England.

The play, "Victoria Regina," with Helen Hayes as the queen, which had such prodigious success in New York, could not at first be given in England, for the censor usually forbids the impersonation of members of the royal family on the stage. But finally the censorship was removed from this play and it is having a successful run in London.

Mr. Christopher Hobhouse, who reviewed the performance in the London Spectator, after reminding his readers that thousands had seen it in Paris, and tens of thousands in New York, expresses his regret that it has been allowed to appear in England. He thinks it savors of mere social gossip, like "it may not be generally known that His Majesty's umbrellas have eight spokes instead of the usual ten," and for this delectable bit to the social reporter the housemaid expected half a guinea.

• • • •

He adds that the discretion of the Victorians prevented gossip. "We have less authentic knowledge of the life at court in Victoria's reign than in any other period." Hence the playwright, Laurence Housman, overemphasized John Brown and Disraeli, and "where recorded facts run short, and innuendo is exhausted, Mr. Housman has fallen back on his imagination. Unfortunately, it is a very pawky imagination."

Although the Scotch word pawky is common enough in England, I have never heard it from American lips; I shall be pardoned for translating it; it means arch, or sly. But there is no word that is an exact synonym. It is not so bad as sniggering and not so good as clever.

Mr Hobhouse says that the Lord Chamberlain (the censor) is reported as charmed with the play, but he feels that the Queen has been treated not only inaccurately but with bad taste. "The old lady who made Bismarck sweat with fright is depicted as little short of a half-wit." I am not among the admirers of Bismarck, but I cannot imagine him frightened by anybody or anything.

• • • •

I should like to see the English production. Mr. Hobhouse praises Miss Pamela Stanley as the Queen, and Mr. Carl Esmond as the prince consort is "prodigiously handsome."

He adds, "A more curious means of celebrating the centenary of the Queen's accession could hardly have been devised," though he believes that Mr. Housman meant the portrait to be sympathetic and complimentary. Anyhow, this review by an English critic is interesting reading for Americans. I rather admire his fastidiousness, for I think I understand it; yet my own opinion, apart from the merits and demerits of the portrait, is that the play was one of the most charming and entertaining of the American season, and I think it increased good feeling between British and Americans.

Tom McCarthy

What Happens At The Union Station . . After Midnight?

"I ASSURE YOU I'm not worrying about my baggage," said the man in the checkered suit, "but can anyone tell me what happened to those pajamas that my wife gave me?"

TOM McCARTHY.

"I assure you," said the man in the checkered suit, "that if the pajamas were in this office I would recognize them immediately. They are, I may say, unmistakable."

"Bill," said the tall young man with him, "if you don't quiet down you're going to spend the next week right here in Washington."

"If," said Bill, with drunken dignity, "if it were not for the matter of the pajamas, I could look forward to such a stay with equa-equanim-equanam—"

"Skip it," said the tall young man.

At that point, Mr. Counselman, acting station master after midnight, came into the room. A tall, lean man with a hint of military severity in his bearing, he transfixed "Bill" with a gaze at once injured and accusing.

"I'm not so drunk," Bill said, "and if only I could find those pajamas I could continue my trip with equa-equanam-equa—"

"I really don't think he'd do any harm if we bundle him into a berth," said the tall young man.

"You know the rules of the road," Mr Counselman said, "and we can't run the risk of disturbing other passengers, particularly after his little argument with the porters and the yard men."

Bill poked an inquiring head between the two who were passing judgment on his fitness to travel.

"If," said Bill, "I were not afraid of flying, I would never ride a railroad train again. Never, ever." Bill rather liked the phrase and he kept repeating over and over again, "Never, ever."

"But," Bill ended on a tragic note, "I am very much afraid of flying."

• • • •

BILL AND HIS missing pajamas were a part of the comedy nightly enacted under the great arched roof of the Union Station; but the gray, echoing building witnesses its share of drama and, once and again, tragedy cracks through the comparative quiet of the early morning hours.

"They can't hitch trains out of here," Mr. Cunningham, the station policeman, told me, "because of the electrification of the road. We don't have to worry about anybody trying to ride blind baggage, because tramps know that it's just too dangerous."

"Tell him about the guy that tried it," said Mr. McKinney, the plain clothesman on duty after midnight.

"There's not much to tell," Mr. Cunningham said. "Some fellow made a bet he could hitch a ride to Philadelphia. He struck the high tension wire above the train. He lost his bet . . . and his life."

"The real tramps know that they're taking an awful gamble with death trying to ride the roof of these electrified trains," Mr. McKinney said.

• • • •

THIRTY OR MORE people reclined on the benches of the waiting room and I asked officers how they told which were the bona fide travelers and which were the "tramps" heading in for a night's sleep.

They told me they didn't do much detective work to figure out who was who. They just went around and questioned all who looked slightly suspicious.

Nearby, walking up and down with an even, mechanical stride, a postal guard surveyed the unloading of registered mail. A leather sling supported a sub-machine gun and his fingers rested in readiness near the trigger.

"Ever have to use it?" I asked.

"No," he said, "and I hope I never have to."

Hat pulled low over his face, he continued his pacing.

• • • •

AS THE HANDS of the clock moved toward three the main waiting room subsided into quiet, broken only by the swish of mops, as the clean-up crew moved across the acres of floor.

At the Travelers' Aid desk, Mrs. Palmieri looked not at all tired, though she has been on duty since before midnight.

"Whom do we help? Why anybody that needs it," Mrs. Palmieri said.

"We see that children traveling alone are taken care of. We help the old folks and sometimes the young ones, too. I had one young couple in here tonight that had run short of money on their way from South Carolina to New York, because they'd eaten too many lunches on the trip North. I helped them get in touch with relatives in White Plains. We help most everyone," she said, "including pigeons."

"Pigeons?"

"Oh, yes," she said, "somebody found a carrier pigeon out in front the other night. The poor thing was so exhausted it could hardly stand, much less fly. They brought the pigeon in and we saw that it was put on a cornice outside the building where no cat could get to it.

"The next day, after the rest, the pigeon flew on."

"Well, aren't carrier pigeons a little out of your line?" I asked.

Mrs. Palmieri started to laugh, as she pointed to the "Travelers' Aid" sign, and responded with unsurmountable logic, "Why, they're travelers, aren't they?"

Officials See Quick Response For Housing Aid

Federal Subsidies Expected to Be Sought for Many Projects.

By the Associated Press.

State and local officials, here for a two-day study of the new $526,000,000 housing program, predicted yesterday that Federal subsidies would be sought quickly for scores of scattered housing projects.

Most of the projects, they reported, were shaped for Public Works Administration loans and grants which were not forthcoming.

The officials said renewed applications would be filed under the more liberal terms of the Wagner-Steagall act as soon as President Roosevelt appoints an administrator to head the new United States Housing Authority.

300 Pending Requests.

(The PWA, which made its final "pump-priming" allotments this week, said it had 300 pending applications to aid dwelling construction programs.)

Representatives of official housing authorities, State boards of housing and mayors of cities contemplating organizing agencies to sponsor housing and slum clearance programs were summoned to the conference, opening tomorrow, by the American Federation of Housing Authorities.

Hinges Upon Rulings.

Langdon Post, chairman of the New York City Housing Authority and federation president, said the two days would be devoted to a study of problems growing out of the housing act.

"Success of the program," Post said, "depends largely upon the administration of the legislation. Many of the provisions are subject to varied interpretations."

Whether many cities are able to meet the requirement to provide 10 per cent of the cost of housing projects, he said, hinges largely upon administrative rulings.

Czechs, Oldest Foe Of Vatican, Make Pact With Church

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 23 (AP).—Czechoslovakia, new as a nation but with the oldest anti-Vatican traditions in Europe, has come to terms with the Catholic Church after nearly two decades of difficult negotiation.

By a recently concluded pact the Holy See recognized the existence of the new republic and arranged to assign archbishoprics and dioceses conforming to the boundaries established by the post-war treaties.

Hitherto Catholic Church administration in Czechoslovakia, the Bohemia which produced John Hus, forerunner of Martin Luther, had clung to the obsolete political boundaries of the Austro-Hungarian empire.

2 Hurt in Navy Air Crash.

Warship Is Launched.

Birkenhead, England, Sept. 23 (AP). Argentina's seventh warship to be launched in Britain this year today slid down gaily decorated slipways, a spot of champagne on her prow. She was launched as Destroyer Misiones, and cost about $2,000,000.

Japan to Conquer China in a Month, News Writer Says

Japan will conquer Nanking and the armies of Chiang Kai-shek within the month, and vanquish the opposition of Chinese military leaders.

This was the opinion expressed yesterday by Frederick V. Williams, San Francisco newspaperman, former Post writer and correspondent and public relations man for the Eucharistic Congress at Budapest next year.

Williams arrived here yesterday from China.

"The Japanese people are very friendly toward the Roosevelt policies and regime," he said. "They wish to stabilize China and trade there."

New York Guards Son of Mussolini

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—Flanked by diplomats and guarded by secret service men and members of the police alien squad, Vittorio Mussolini, 20-year-old son of the Italian premier, took a hasty peek at New York today, prior to leaving for Hollywood and a brief career in the movie studios.

An anti-Fascist demonstration on his arrival was frustrated when the blond, husky son of Il Duce was spirited aboard a cutter while the Liner Rex was still in quarantine, and hustled into Manhattan secretly under heavy guard. The time of his projected departure tomorrow from Newark airport was kept secret.

Two Judges Resign Under Quezon Fire

Manila, Sept. 23 (AP).—Two judges were reported today to have submitted their resignations to Commonwealth President Manuel L. Quezon because of his bitter attacks upon them in the case of an employer who won a court victory over a family seeking $500 compensation for the death of a laborer.

Concerning the man who drowned in the Pasig River while attempting to fulfill orders to recover a piece of lumber, Quezon said yesterday: "If judges are going to decide cases like that, we are going to have a revolution in the Philippines."

Franco Writes Letter Reassuring Mrs. Dahl

Cannes, France, Sept. 23 (AP).—Spanish Insurgent Generalissimo Franco informed Mrs. Harold E. Dahl in a personal letter she received here today that her American aviator husband, now Franco's prisoner, would be exchanged for an insurgent flier held by the Spanish government "if the occasion arises."

Written on the letterhead of the insurgent general staff and dated from Burgos, September 10, the letter assured the blonde American girl that her husband, from Champaign, Ill., was "perfectly well treated." The letter was her first direct word from the insurgent chief.

CCC Enrolls Eskimos; Plans Reindeer Shelters

Juneau, Alaska, Sept. 23 (AP).—The New Deal reached the Eskimo today—and now he's in the CCC. The first all-native Civilian Conservation Corps was established by Charles Burdick, director of Alaska CCC, who returned here today after a seven-week tour of much of the western part of the Territory. Eskimo lads will work on projects that range from building reindeer shelters to airports.

Former President Dies.

San Jose Costa Rica, Sept. 23 (AP).—Former President Celto Gonzalez Viquez, of Costa Rica, died today after a long illness. He had been planning to leave shortly for the United States for medical treatment.

1,000 to Attend First Red Cross Rally Since War

Admiral Grayson to Lead Meeting Here; Radio Broadcast Set.

More than 1,000 Red Cross workers, led by their national chairman, Admiral Cary T. Grayson, will attend the annual Roll Call and first rally of the Red Cross in the District since the World War tomorrow night in the sail loft of the Navy Yard.

With Arthur Godfrey, radio entertainer, as master of ceremonies, celebration of the twenty-first annual Roll Call will be broadcast over the four local radio stations.

Speakers scheduled to be heard include Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, chairman of the District of Columbia chapter; Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, M. L. Sperry, president of the Washington Gas Light Co.; W. W. Wheeler, assistant vice president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.; Maj. Fred W. Boscher, chief of finance, U. S. A.; Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, and a number of others.

According to Sperry, general chairman of the campaign, this year's Roll Call will be the largest since the war and will be attended by all leaders in the organization except Gen. John J. Pershing, honorary chairman of the Roll Call, who is vacationing in France.

The Navy Band, under the direction of Assistant Leader Alex Morris, will play popular marches, featuring "All Hands," a composition by Lieut. Charles Benter, conductor of the Navy Band.

Woman, 37, Takes Life by Gas Here

Despondent over ill health, Mrs. Dolly Griffith, 37, 2115 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, killed herself with illuminating gas early yesterday.

The woman was found in bed, with gas flowing from four open burners on the kitchen stove, by two janitors who told police they were attracted by the odor.

A note found in the apartment was addressed to the woman's mother, Mrs. Blanche Snyder, of Silver Spring, Md. Police said the note stated "I do not wish to live."

Immunization Sought For 45,000 Children

An immunization goal of 45,000 children in the District under 5 years of age was set yesterday by Dr. James G. Cumming, chief of the health department's bureau of preventable diseases, in the drive against diphtheria.

Pointing out that half the deaths from diphtheria in Washington take children under 5, Dr. Cumming urged parents to have their children inoculated at once.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Safety Play de Luxe.

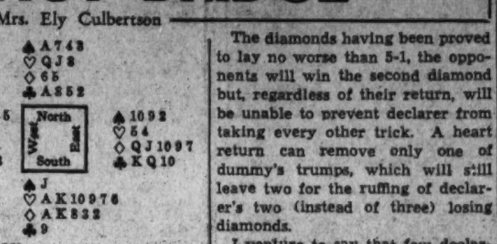
The final test of a player's ability is his knowledge of safety plays. Judging from my own experience, this department, certainly one of the most important in Bridge, has been woefully neglected even by alleged experts. Of course, I do not refer to the standard and simple safety plays that have been widely publicized. The one inolved in today's hand, which I have borrowed from a British Bridge Magazine, would escape the notice, I think, of all but a handful of masters.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

South's last bid was on the conservative side, but he probably feared losing a diamond trick. That this fear was justified was proved by the outcome. The fact was that South lost two diamond tricks.

West opened the spade King; dummy won, and led a diamond, which declarer won with the Ace. Dummy was then re-entered with the club Ace, and another diamond led toward the closed hand. This was good play, as a precaution against East's holding a singleton and ruffing the King, had it been led from the closed hand—but it was not quite good enough!

As it happened, West ruffed declarer's King and returned his remaining trump. Now, dummy was down to two trumps and declarer had three low diamonds. Obviously, he could not take care of all of them and finally had to concede a diamond for the defeat of his contract.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
4 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	5 N T	Pass

The correct play of this hand is not readily apparent, yet it unquestionably exists. After declarer's diamond Ace held, the safety play was to return a small diamond! This will undoubtedly startle the average reader but, nevertheless, it is without a flaw.

The diamonds having been proved to lay no worse than 5-1, the opponents will win the second diamond but, regardless of their return, will be unable to prevent declarer from taking every other trick. A heart return can remove only one of dummy's trumps, which will still leave two for the ruffing of declarer's two (instead of three) losing diamonds.

I venture to say that few declarers would bring home the slam on this hand. It might be interesting to my readers to submit the North-South hands to experts of their acquaintance, and ask them how they would play.

Jo-Jotte Pointer.

The chances are about 6 to 1 against a player's obtaining any single card that he may want from the draw; but when any one of four cards will produce a valuable gain in the strength of the hand, the player has better than an even chance of improving his hand. There is in addition the possibility of some unexpected draw of the two or three exact cards best suited to the hand which will produce melding or playing strength where it was least expected.

Estate Executors Ask Tax Review

The National Savings & Trust Co. and Leo Baum, both of Washington, and Fannie R. Weinberg, Philadelphia, asked the Board of Tax Appeals yesterday to redetermine a $15,318 deficiency in 1930 and 1932 income taxes assessed by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

They had been assessed as executors of the estate of the late Morton H. Goldenberg, Washington department store owner. The contention states that the bureau erred in disallowing deductions for the cost of inventory of the decedent's Washington department store business and losses totaling $26,039 on real estate transactions.

Another contention listed an error in reducing by $23,061 losses from sales of securities of the estate acquired by the decedent from his father, Moses Goldenberg.

Other errors listed by the executors included the addition of $21,371 of alleged profit on the foreclosure of real estate and the consolidation with the executor's income of $13,573 net income from real estate held by them as trustees of the Goldenberg estate.

Hitching a Ride on Bus Lands Youth in Hospital

The youth lost his grip while perched on the rear fender. Doctors feared his knee and right foot were fractured. Police said the bus was driven by Ernest M. Mason, of 705 Seventeenth street southeast.

Hodges Attends Parley Of Route No. 1 Group

Curtis Hodges, executive director of the Greater National Capital Committee, is attending the opening meeting of the U. S. No. 1 Highway Association's trade promotion and highway development campaign, being held in Richmond today. The campaign was launched to combat the present diversion of traffic from No. 1 to other highways.

The association has reported a 10 per cent drop in traffic on the highway from last year, while other roads between New England and Florida have been traveled by 18 per cent more cars during the same period. The new campaign will stress highway improvement, comfort, safety and publicity.

Miss Lawrence to Give Matinee on Saturday

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Copyright, 1937, for The Washington Post.

A visiting Englishwoman who knows intimately several of Queen Elizabeth's ladies-in-waiting declares—on her own authority, not the Queen's—that Edward's romantic marriage feels a draft, and that the Duke is terribly homesick.

* * * *

At a Washington official dinner table a place near the head bestows the most honor, but the people toward the foot of the table seem to have the most fun.

* * * *

In the Senate sit two former Democratic Secretaries of the Treasury—Mr. Glass and Mr. McAdoo . . . One is opposed to everything the President does, one is for everything . . . So where are you?

* * * *

Maybe I'm susceptible, but in my estimation, Eleanor Roosevelt's autobiography, now in its sixth installment in the Ladies Home Journal, is one of the most candid, stimulating and informative memoirs ever written by a great lady, worthy of a spot just below The Journal of Marie Bashkirichev.

"—Uncle Sam at the races"

Washington raconteurs like to build their stories tall . . . The popular legend has it, for example, that the annual fees at one of the de luxe golf clubs runs into the thousands of dollars a year per member.

* * * *

Inquiry reveals that the initiation fee is $250 and the annual dues $220, or about the same as the best club in any town of 200,000.

* * * *

Cruellest rule of Washington etiquette: Don't take a second helping of anything offered . . . A good bedtime story for dictators is Walter Lippman's new book, "The Good Society." . . . It's also a good tonic for quavering democracies . . .

* * * *

Uncle Sam cautions his hirelings to use the cheapest transportation in existence the day of a trip . . . So an official was congratulating himself that he was able to ride an airplane one day at the cost of train fare plus Pullman.

* * * *

But the accounting office in Washington discovered (it must have taken hours to look it up!) that on the day of this particular trip a new airline had launched a new service at a slightly lower rate . . . The new line survived only a few days, because it's rates were too low . . . But it was long enough to justify the disallowance of the expense item.

"—great invention gone dusty"

The Capital appears to be even more intensely horse race minded than Hollywood . . . In midafternoon all four local radio stations are blaring forth trackside reports of the races—by a length, by a nose, by a hair.

* * * *

Some of the august officials are in the race track grandstands when, theoretically at least, they should be at their desks saving the Republic . . . And humbler functionaries may be found around the paddock, when they should be home in bed earning some sick leave.

* * * *

Capital knickknacks: There are WPA jobs begging at the National Zoo—which needs more signs so bewildered parents can find the bird cages, hippos and lions, for our insistent brats . . . Another of my pet inventions at the Patent Office is the self-propelling sled, pumped like a sidewalk auto, which theoretically could go uphill . . . Ought to replace the plane for polar exploration . . . Phenomenon for a Congressional investigation: Why have radio pressure voices suddenly gone from the bullying to the boyish . . . How the justices must have chuckled when a colored Catholic was chosen as Justice Black's messenger! . . . The shade of Justice Holmes must have been hovering about.

As 50,000 Thronged Watergate for Presidents Cup Regatta Pageant

Right to Run 'Auto-Railers' Again Sought

Arlington-Fairfax Firm Would Link Virginia With District.

The Arlington & Fairfax Railroad Co. yesterday renewed its application to the Public Utilities Commission for permission to operate auto-railers between points in the District and nearby Virginia.

Proposing a new route, differing from that suggested almost two years ago, the company stated it has 17 auto-railers which travel either on rails or paved highways, and has an option to buy five more.

A similar application was rejected by the Interstate Commerce Commission after a joint hearing by the Public Utilities Commission and the Virginia State Corporation Commission. The joint board had found that the applicant did not meet convenience and necessity rules, and did not show sufficient financial qualifications.

At that time, however, the railway did not have any auto-railers, and it proposed to operate along Pennsylvania avenue.

F. K. Lane, president of the company, proposes in his new petition that the auto-railers enter Washington from Rosslyn via Key Bridge, proceed east on M street to Pennsylvania avenue, easterly on Pennsylvania avenue to Twenty-fifth or Twenty-sixth street, thence south to Virginia avenue southeast on Virginia avenue to Constitution avenue, thence east on Constitution avenue to Pennsylvania avenue, and return in reverse direction.

The company proposes to operate "pick-up" and "delivery" service for passengers, express and mail. It will engage only in interstate commerce, however, and will not haul passengers between points within the District, the petition stated.

Bankhead Assails Smoot-Hawley Tariff

Montgomery, Ala., Sept. 23 (AP).—Senator John H. Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, said today in an article written for the Montgomery Advertiser the Smoot-Hawley tariff act was responsible for declines in cotton exports and "caused disruption of world trade."

"We will not get back our exports until world-wide nationalistic trade barriers are adjusted and American exchange for goods sold us is made easier," Bankhead, author of control and other farm legislation, said.

Davis Will Bid to Lead State G.O.P., Paper Says

Pittsburgh, Sept. 23 (AP).—The Post-Gazette said tonight that United States Senator James J. Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, has resigned from the Republican State executive committee and is planning an independent bid for party leadership.

The paper added that Davis was "reported to have called a conference of friends in Altoona tomorrow night" on the eve of the State committee meeting and "may propose a candidate of his own for State chairman with a fiery attack on present party chieftains.

Regatta Host of 50,000 Sees U. S. Naval Victory Re-enacted

Horoscope Is Identical.

Not only was last night the 158th anniversary of the battle between the Bonhomme Richard and the Serapis; the mock battle took place at virtually the same hour as the original, and — most remarkable coincidence—the stars were in the same position they were in that night of 1779.

Looking over the crowd spread out on the river bank and the even greater throngs peering down from the Arlington Memorial Bridge and the Lincoln Memorial ramp, Capt. Patrick Carroll, chief of the Park Police, said, "Well, I would say 50,000."

A battle such as John Paul Jones was to put up deserved more than mere numbers; it called for a queen. And, sure enough, before the cannonading started a queen appeared.

Boat Is Aglow.

She was lovely Louise Colbert, who reigns over the regatta. With her maids of honor, she arrived on a Coast Guard cutter which, aglow from stem to stern, looked like a merry-go-round that had broken away from its moorings. Behind it came a flotilla of other gayly lighted craft.

Queen Mary Louise was given a great bunch of roses, and then she and her maids took their places on a boat-shaped throne. Now the hour had come for battle and the dark stretch of water over near the Virginia shore became the coast of Scotland.

Presently the outline of a high-masted black frigate moved down the channel from Georgetown and another painted yellow came upstream from the direction of Alexandria. It was dark out there, and the frigates were like two ghost ships, but illumination was carried to the crowd in the words of Historian Charles Colfax Long, the narrator.

Rocket Sails at Serapis.

"At this moment," Long confided in the microphone, "Capt. Pierson, the master of the Serapis, hailed the Bonhomme Richard and demanded:

"'What ship is that? Answer immediately or I shall be under the necessity of firing on you.'

"The Bonhomme Richard answered with a shot from the forward deck guns which split the mast of the Serapis."

As Narrator Long uttered the words, a booming sound came from the American ship and a rocket sailed over the Serapis. The Serapis answered with a full broadside.

Air Transports Pass Over.

Passengers on the big transport planes heading through the bombardment for the airport must have fancied for a moment that they were over Shanghai.

The Bonhomme Richard drew nearer to the Serapis, still blazing away.

"The ships being now very close together (continued the narrator) Jones attempted to board the Serapis and Capt. Pierson hailed him with: 'Has your ship struck?' To which Jones gave his immortal answer: 'I have not yet begun to fight.'

Tribute Paid by Briton.

"As the smoke of the battle clears Jones has boarded the Serapis and accepted the sword of Capt. Pierson. In surrendering Capt. Pierson paid tribute to Jones with the words: 'It is painful to deliver up my sword to a man who had fought with such a large halter around his neck.'"

The British skipper didn't know how big and heavy that halter really was. Jones' ship was sinking, only 3 guns remained in action and 100 prisoners were running amuck on the decks.

Anyway, the Yank was victorious now. The flag was waving triumphantly out there in the river; the Navy Band was whooping it up with "Yankee Doodle," and the crowd was sending up its cheer.

The spell was broken.

"Peanuts and chocolate bars," cried a hawker.

The attack on Fort McHenry and the inspiration for Francis Scott Key's "Star-Spangled Banner" had to be delayed for 15 minutes in the interests of progress. The bombs that were about to be fired had an altitude of 1,000 feet. If one of them exploded in front of the New York plane that was coming in, it would mean tragedy. So the attack was held up until the plane was in.

When the bombardment of Fort McHenry did start it was a beauty. The sky became rampant with color, as if the gods were at play, hurling stars, bolts and other celestial jewels at one another. That's what it looked like, but, of course, it really was the British fire on Fort McHenry.

In the end, amid a great bursting of bombs, American flags began raining from the sky. Francis Scott Key had his inspiration.

Tonight there will be street dancing along Pennsylvania avenue, at several spots between Seventh and Seventeenth streets.

Man Found in Street With Head Wounded

Frederick J. Poston, 29, 226 Twelfth street northeast, was found unconscious, his head badly wounded, last night in the 1100 block of H street northeast. The cause of his injury was not immediately determined.

He was taken to Casualty Hospital where it was found he had a possible fractured skull. Police, who were investigating the accident, notified his wife, Mrs. Ida Poston.

Capt. Turner, Long Potomac Sailor, Expires

Capt. John Henry Turner, 74, familiar figure in Potomac waters for more than 59 years and master of the S. S. Charles Macalester for 28 years, died yesterday at his home, 829 Third street, northeast.

Born in St. Mary's County, Md., Capt. Turner entered upon his sea career at the age of 15 as a deckhand on a small fishing schooner. He later entered the employ of the old Mount Vernon & Marshall Hall Steamboat Co., and worked on the S. S. Macalester for 42 years.

The Macalester was sold in 1930 and Capt. Turner resigned from active service. The ship, stripped of its body, was recently sold to a lumber concern in Baltimore for $20.

Two of his sons, William and George Turner, have followed in their father's footsteps and are seamen. Benjamin and Richard Turner, two older sons, are employed in Washintgon. He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Mary Ruth Raffo and Mrs. Alice Dorsey.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. at the St. Aloysius Church and burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Parking Space Given Police at University

Parking space has been provided District and Maryland policemen attending the traffic school at the University of Maryland and the 25 officers who found notices in their cars telling them they were parking in a restricted area, won't have to worry any more, it was learned yesterday.

One of the notices was attached to a machinei n which Capt. Milton Smith, head of the police traffic bureau, was a passenger.

Howard C. Beck Funeral In Baltimore Today

Funeral services for Howard Clinton Beck, sr., 69, will be held in Baltimore at 2 p. m. today. Mr. Beck, a certified public accountant with offices in the Woodward Building, was stricken with pneumonia last week and died Wednesday.

Beck was president of the Baltimore Philatelic Society and also belonged to the Washington Philatelic Society.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Flora McElroy Beck; a daughter, Mrs. Carl G. Kirwan; his son and several grandchildren.

Mrs. Charlotte Hankin Relates Year of Study of Bar in Europe

D. C. Woman Lawyer Finds That French Custom of Establishing Offices in Home Helps Advocates of Her Sex.

Although feminine lawyers labor at a disadvantage in several of the European countries, they are favored in France by the custom which calls for establishment of offices in the home in preference to the "downtown" arrangement followed in this country, Mrs. Charlotte Hankin last night told members of the Women's Bar Association of the District of Columbia.

Mrs. Hankin, a member of the District bar, has just returned from a year's study of the courts of Europe, made as recipient of the crusade international fellowship of the American Association of University Women. She addressed the women lawyers of Washington at their first fall meeting at Wesley Hall. Miss Annabel Matthews, the new president, served as chairman.

"In France, the bar is a personal profession," Mrs. Hankin said. "I met numerous women barristers whose offices were always in their homes. If their husbands also were barristers, their offices were in the homes, too. This enables the woman to keep an eye on husband, home, and children, and at the same time to do all the clerical work connected with her profession."

Mrs. Hankin has been a law partner to her husband, Gregory Hankin, since soon after her graduation from a Washington law school 13 years ago. They have an office in the Woodward Building.

She found Europeans deeply interested in the Supreme Court problems of America, she said, as well as thoroughly familiar with the "nine old men." In three countries she observed the workings of constitutional courts which "until recently, at least, aimed to follow our Supreme Court." This was in Czechoslovakia, Austria and Switzerland.

The most interesting courts, however, she found in Hungary, Russia and England. Hungarian judges appear in court wearing regular business suits, and there are "crowds of attorneys." The Hungarians, Mrs. Hankin declared, are "almost as litigious as we are."

English judges are so far removed from the ordinary run of citizens that Mrs. Hankin found a friend "absolutely shocked" when she expressed the desire to meet one of them personally. She learned later, however, that their aloofness was overestimated.

The people's courts of Russia she found presided over by both professional and lay judges and held in any old ramshackle building available. She stressed the opinion that any critique of the Russian judicial system now is premature, and reminded that the law of the country is designed to protect the Socialist state, to which individual rights and freedom are subordinate.

Judges of all continental countries, Mrs. Hankin pointed out, are recruited from the civil service and not from the practicing bar as they are in America. She also reminded that this country received its idea of the "separation of powers" from the French political philosopher, Montesquieu, and showed how the same doctrine has been used in France and the United States to develop two entirely different judicial systems.

Five in Family Ill; Pastry Is Blamed

Police last night began an investigation of food poisoning of one Washington family—and reportedly another—traced, they said, to pastry.

The stricken family was that of Thomas Maher, 1208 Kennedy street northwest. Made violently ill two hours after eating the pastry were Mr. and Mrs. Maher, their son, Thomas Maher, jr., 17, and Mrs. Maher's mother, 72-year-old Mrs. Louisa Wilson. A fifth person, Buddy Forsythe, a roomer in the Maher home, also was made ill.

All of those stricken except Forsythe ate the pastry at dinner at about 6 p. m. and were stricken almost simultaneously. Dr. John W. Crowe, 1325 Park road northwest, was called at 8 p. m. and treated the family for three hours before pronouncing them out of danger. Forsythe ate one of the pastries earlier in the day and was forced by sickness to return from work.

D. C. Citizens To Be Heard In Tax Choice

Three Plans Suggested by Commissioners; Income Levy Favored.

6-Point Legislative Program Studied Here at Meeting.

Washington taxpayers will be invited to decide whether they would rather pay an income tax, a sales tax or continue to pay the present business privilege tax before the District Commissioners submit a new tax bill to Congress, Melvin C. Hazen, president of the board, said yesterday.

The public hearing was recommended by Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, at a luncheon conference on local legislation. Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal was host at the Mayflower Hotel to Senator King and the Commissioners.

While reiterating his opinion that an income tax is the most fair method of taxation, Senator King suggested that the citizens who pay the taxes should be given an opportunity to make known their preference.

Senator King said that he had received numerous complaints against the operation of the business privilege tax, which the Senate accepted in conference after twice rejecting it.

The District Committee chairman, who will leave today on a month's trip to Hawaii, discussed the 6-point major legislative program with the District officials.

He renewed his promise to push a bill to broaden the powers of the District, and Commissioner Hazen said that such a measure will be drafted and ready for introduction at the opening of the next Congress.

Hazen said the bill will carry out the general proposals previously advocated by Senator King, viz, to place all administrative agencies of the District under the Commissioners.

This would mean that the Board of Education and the Board of Public Welfare no longer would operate as independent agencies, that all recreational facilities would be consolidated, and that the park police would be absorbed by the Metropolitan Police Department.

Senator King also plans to sponsor a bill to set up a District civil service system that will be similar to but separate from the United States civil service setup.

How to 'See' and Appreciate Modern Talking Films Explained in Book of First-Aid to Screen-Gazers

Barrett C. Kiesling Dissects Intricate Process of Production in Understandable Language; Week of Disaster in the Theater; More Subscription Plays for National; John Golden Sees His Show; Notes.

STILL moist from the presses of the Johnson Publishing Co., there has arrived at this desk my valued copy of a book that should be in the possession of everyone who wishes to arrive at an intelligent understanding of and a comprehensive ability to analyze, modern motion pictures. It is the eagerly awaited "Talking Pictures: How They Are Made and How to Appreciate Them," by Barrett C. Kiesling, high in the councils of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

BELL.

In his 332-page treatise on the subject, Mr. Kiesling has in no particular duplicated either the content or the purpose of "The New Technique of Screen Writing," by Tamar Lane. He has, instead, set down a complete recital of the manifold and diffused contributions of the 276 arts and crafts that enter into the completion of the present-day talking picture as it is seen around the world. After a chapter or two of generalizations, the author gets down to the solid business of detailing the entire intricate process of producing a feature talking-picture, from the point of story selection through all of the subsequent steps that must be taken in the successful consummation of the finished work.

In addition to describing the functions of the scenario writer, casting directors, stars, director, set designers, costume creators, make-up experts, sound recorders, property men, musical directors, film developers, film editors, cutters, assemblers and all the rest, Kiesling goes exhaustively into the vital matters of why stories adapted from stage plays and novels are changed for the screen, how sets are made, "making folks over," the use of lights and camera, social influences, the short subject, "films abroad" and myriad other important considerations that must enter into any sound appraisal of a film as it is seen by the public in its theaters.

The point is stressed that the motion picture, unlike others of the arts, does not represent a single unit of effort, but the ultimate composite of the creative efforts of a vast army of specialists in their respective fields; that the motion picture is the tangible result of concerted effort so diffused as to preclude the blanket condemnation of a film play because of any single aspect of its production.

This is a truth that has been borne in upon all who have visited the major studios in Hollywood and seen pictures in the making. That is why motion picture critics, returning from their tours of inspection have approached their professional tasks with a new viewpoint and a considerably altered method of approach. I should say that Barrett Kiesling's book is the next best thing to an actual personal visit to the West Coast.

It is profusely illustrated with illuminating photographic reproductions of many of the technical and artistic processes with which it deals. Since it is our old friend's "home lot," these pictorial representations of the workings of one of the world's most intricate industries all are culled from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, one of the largest and best equipped plants of its kind in existence on either side of any ocean.

Possibly one of the most valuable services that "Talking Pictures" performs is to make clear why it is just a little silly for the layman to remark, when passing out through the lobby, "Say, I could make a better picture than that!" or "Why, it isn't like the book at all!"

Some time ago in this space I remarked that I hoped I would enjoy reading Barrett's book when it was finally printed. Well, I certainly have. Incidentally, the foreword is by Will H. Hays and I enjoyed reading that, too, because it so completely expresses my own views.

• • • •

This has been a week of disaster in the theater in Washington. The shock of Osgood Perkins' sudden death from a heart attack, only a few hours after his first performance in "Susan and God," and the later inflammatory eye ailment that attacked Gertrude Lawrence and compelled the cancelation of the scheduled Wednesday matinee at the National, may have obscured the fact that, beginning Monday, the Marie McQuarrie Harp Ensemble, overturing through last night with Phil Lampkin's augmented orchestra at Loew's Capitol, was reduced from five to four. On Sunday night, Helen Rogers, one of the artistes in this organization, suffered a double fracture of the ankle, with attendant dislocations and lesions, and since has been resting in Georgetown Hospital, partially encased in plaster of Paris and undergoing a succession of X-rays. While on the road to recovery, Miss Rogers will not be able to leave the Capital with her troupe.

And if you thought you recognized a familiar face among the McQuarrie harpistes, you were entirely correct. It was Viola Abrams, for several seasons a member of Daniel Breeskin's 30-piece orchestra at Crandall's Metropolitan Theater. For a large portion of the nine years she has been away from Washington, Miss Abrams has been a member of the McQuarrie Ensemble, having toured Europe with the group with eminent success. Having been professionally associated with her for a protracted period, in an earlier incarnation, it was a pleasant surprise to have Viola drop by the desk Wednesday night to say "hello"—and a few other things.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Sept. 23.—If you want to see the most entertaining show in Hollywood, watch a bevy of screen mothers sitting on the sidelines of a set while their precocious progeny work before the cameras. Such maternal pride — and such maternal jealousy! Such barbed compliments — and such subtle digs! And heaven help the poor director who gives those militant ladies a chance to relate the miraculous doings of their respective kiddies!

ZASU PITTS.

Some years ago, a friend of mine produced a series of pictures featuring eight children of assorted sizes. Poor chap—their mothers almost tore him limb from limb before the first picture was finished. Each mama would drag him away, out of ear-shot of the rest, to tell him what brats the other youngsters were and what a phenomenal child was hers. The pictures made money but he gave up in despair after the third and went to the mountains for a long rest. Today he is a misanthropic bachelor who shudders at the mere sight of a mother.

Of course, there are exceptions—Mrs. Withers, for instance. Hollywood loves Mrs. Withers—and regrets that more mothers of screen prodigies are not like her. And, in my opinion, if more mothers were like Mrs. Withers, there would be more child prodigies. Many a promising youngster—and the term takes in those in their late 'teens—would have been a star if her mama had not made herself such a pest that the studio bosses had to fire the daughter in self-protection.

Just four years ago, Stuart Walker, then a Paramount director, had a battle with the studio. The "front office" had hired a comparatively unknown stage actress and wanted him to use her in the leading role of a picture he was to direct. He refused. "She has no self-confidence—and she can't act," he said. "If she plays the lead, get another director!" Today, as the guest of Stuart Walker, now a Paramount producer, I watched Gertrude Michael working in retakes for her new starring opus. "That girl," said Walker, "is one of the really great actresses in this business—I fought to have her in this picture!"

Uh-huh—she is the same girl he rejected four years ago. But four years are four centuries in Topsy-Turvy town.

The height of something or other has been reached by Robert Kalloch, Columbia's fashion designer. Even Hollywood, which should be inured to idiosyncrasies, stands agape and agog. Mr. Kalloch has converted one of the rooms in his ultra-ultra apartment into a private home for his pet cat. The walls are protected by ivy-covered chicken wire and the floor is covered with cushions designed for Tabby's comfort.

STARTS TODAY AT LOEW'S PALACE

Enormous Set Used in Filming Of 'Rosalie'

Mighty Panoramas Staged at Huge Expense for 15-Minute Scene.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Sept. 23.—Such a palace as only Hollywood could imagine, opened for business tonight, with 16,000 volts of electricity to light it, 500 dancing girls to populate it, and three truck loads of blankets to keep the gals warm between shots.

One thousand sun lamps flashed across the vast structure. Two hundred and fifty arc lights made it brighter still. Twenty fountains sent water 10 feet into the air. Three hundred trees sprayed with silver glistened in the background.

Gypsy bands and soldiers in fancy pants strolled all over the place, assistant directors panted, loud speakers boomed orders and the official statistician came up from his adding machine with information that it took two tons of nails, 500,000 feet of lumber and 400 tons of paint—exclusive of that on the ladies' lips—to erect this mythical palace of romanza.

This set is on M-G-M's back lot and is the biggest and most elaborate built since "Ben Hur." It merits all of Hollywood's best adjectives.

Will Boil Down.

The only trouble is that when you see the resultant film, "Rosalie," a couple of months hence, the screen will turn the kaleidoscopic colors into grays and boil down the magnificent sweep of the scene into one flickering picture about 15 feet square.

Consider for instance the dancing girls who do homage to the love affair of Eleanor Powell and Nelson Eddy. For six weeks they have been rehearsing under the tutelage of Albertina Rasch.

Now they're dancing in the palace courtyard, the size of a full city block, hundreds of them in yellow hooped skirts, keeping perfect step to the tunes from the loudspeakers. The dress on each girl consists of 18 yards of organdie, 35 yards of tarlitan, 15 yards of silk lining, 59 yards of spring wire hoops, and 1,000 spangles. Multiply that by 500 and you've got something. (So has the wardrobe department, which is wondering where it will store these costumes when the shooting's done.)

The girls dance for perhaps an hour, under the megaphoned directions of Madam Rasch. Then they rest. The night is cold. Trucks drive up with blankets to wrap around their shoulders.

Camera Cranes for Shots.

The camera, on a gigantic crane mounted above eight motor truck wheels and pushed by a crew of 24 men, lumbers across the courtyard for closeups of the singing girls, who look even colder than their dancing sisters. They wear silvery brassieres, brief skirts and plenty of talcum powder.

Cameras will grind for three more nights, before Director W. S. Van Dyke gets all the footage he needs. Pay checks will go to more than 1,600 persons, including extras, technichians and cast. A special cafeteria seating 320 customers, and 1,000 more under awnings outside, will function nightly until 4 a. m. A power substation will drop the 16,000 volt main-line current to 2,300 volts for the six generators supplying the lamps.

Everybody from Van Dyke to the lowest scrip girl will work as hard as humans can. The result will be several thousand feet of film, which will be pruned—and pruned again—until in the finished film the palace shots will consume not more than 15 minutes on the screen.

Butler's Stable Pays $400 Profit

When it comes to race horses, Director David Butler is as canny as he is in directing pictures.

While most of the stables of Hollywood film stars and directors lose thousands of dollars each year, being operated only for the sport of the game, Butler figures that his stable of eight horses will show a profit of $400 for the season, which closed for them at Saratoga.

the premiere of "Madame Bovary," featuring Constance Cummings in the title role. Simultaneously, the New York office announces additional plays from which the subscription season may be completed.

Already we are assured of Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in "Amphitryon 38" and the New York cast in "Tovarich," with Marta Abba, to be presented here the weeks of October 18 and November 1, respectively. The other three plays, it seems, now may prove to be "The Ghost of Yankee Doodle," with Ethel Barrymore and Dudley Digges; "Yes, My Darling Daughter," with Lucile Watson, Peggy Conklin and Violet Heming, and S. N. Behrman's new play, "Wine of Choice."

It is reported that while the supply of lower priced seats in the balcony has been exhausted for all performances, there remain other good seats for all performances for late subscribers. For the Wednesday and Saturday matinees subscribers still may secure locations in every price range. Subscription books will remain open until October 4.

The Post lost one of its veteran employes in the death yesterday of Edward Douglas, for more than three decades an elevator operator in The Post Building. As one who has gone up and down with him countless number of times during the past 30 years or so and never have heard him speak a sharp or impatient word, no matter what the provocation, I mourn "Doug's" passing as a faithful, graying worker whom I always shall remember as a kindly and helpful old friend. For him that buzzer will be eternally silent—which may be part of his reward for a life well lived.

• • • •

While watching his first public performance of the present cast in "Susan and God," at the National Theater Wednesday night, Producer John Golden expressed to this column utmost personal satisfaction with the caliber of the work that was being done by those on the stage. There is still some doubt, however, as to the final casting of the role of Barrie Trexel, assumed on instant notice by Paul McGrath, following the tragic death of Osgood Perkins, for the New York run.

Walter Huston, now in the throes of whipping a new play into shape in the West, has been mentioned for the part and one or two others are understood to be in mind. Choice will devolve eventually upon Rachel Crothers, who has the last word as to the casting of every role in her plays. Mr. McGrath's only handicap seems to be lack of a big Broadway "name."

Bankers Fought Reforms, FDIC Head Declares

Should Have Achieved Own Solution, Crowley Tells Kentucky Group.

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 23.—Bankers of the Nation were charged by Leo T. Crowley, of Washington, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, today with opposing "vigorously—sometimes even bitterly—every important reform."

Crowley told the Kentucky Bankers Association, in annual session here:

"How much more valuable would this expenditure of effort have been if bankers had faced the facts, subordinated their vested interests and waded in themselves to achieve a solution of their problems."

Loans Are Increased.

By the Associated Press.

A survey of insured banks showed "significant business improvement" during the year ended June 30, Chairman Leo T. Crowley of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation reported yesterday.

The 13,885 insured banks increased their real estate loans, exclusive of farm land, $203,217,000 during the year. Crowley said this indicated "a wide-spread advance in building and land purchases and improvements."

Loans on farm land rose from $489,244,000 to $504,107,000 and other agricultural loans climbed from $661,606,000 to $726,400,000.

Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve Board said lendable bank funds, reflecting effects of the Administration's "easy money" policy, increased $140,000,000 during the week ended September 22.

The board placed the total supply of "excess reserves," or idle bank funds, at $1,020,000,000.

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—An "impartial and scientific" study of American banking, credit and other financial problems will be made by the Association of Reserve City Bankers, it was announced today by Robert Strickland, of Atlanta, president of the association.

Among the problems in the study, Strickland said, are:

1. Changes in the capital requirements of business, the future of commercial loans, and the demand for short-term capital loans.
2. The investment problem of banks and other financial institutions.
3. The significance of time deposits in commercial banks.
4. Consumer credit and installment financing—how they may be best related to our industrial and financial life.
5. Real estate mortgage financing—its place in the banking structure.

Jury Is Given Case Against Policeman

Despite the fact that Police Court Judge Hobart Newman dismissed a larceny charge against District Policeman Willie (Jim) Matthews, 38, detectives presented evidence to the grand jury.

Judge Newman refused to hold Matthews when he said arresting officers failed to make a prima facie case.

Two other men, John E. Robey, 29, 2217 Chester street southeast, and Thad P. Strader, 32, of 3211 Sixth street southeast, both employed at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, were held for the grand jury on charges of larceny.

Detective Lieut. Clement Cox and a squad arrested Matthews and the other men Wednesday at Robey's house, where a quantity of foodstuffs were located. Matthews denied any knowledge of the thefts.

Meanwhile, Matthews remained under suspension. Officials said that Matthews still will have to face a Police Trial Board.

FAME: Mr. Sam Goldwyn, anxious to make his new "Goldwyn Follies" a success, decided upon a novel idea. He contacted Jascha Heifetz and offered the violinist $25,000 to appear in that movie. Heifetz asked for $100,000 . . . Goldwyn stared at him. "Listen, there are other things to consider besides money," he stated. "This picture will make you famous." . . . Heifetz was somewhat startled, and Goldwyn realized the mistake. "Here's what I mean," he corrected. "How much do you get for one concert now?" . . . "$8,000 a night," the violinist informed . . . Goldwyn was not to be outdone. "Work in my picture," he promised, "and you'll start getting NINE thousand dollars a night!"

D. C. Auto Taxes Held Unreasonable

"The typical District of Columbia motorist must work one to two weeks to pay the taxes on his annual motor travel," Mrs. M. C. Mallon, secretary of the District of Columia Petroleum Association, told a conference on automotive taxation yesterday. The conference, being held here this week under auspices of the American Petroleum Industries Committee, has attracted delegates from petroleum refiners, distributors and service station operators in seven States.

Mrs. Mallon said local motorists are not so well off as the Government thinks they are. "They contribute more tax money in special and general taxes than any other group," she said, yet more than half earn "less than $30 a week. Most of them have never owned a new car. They ride an average of 40 eight-hour days a year, much of that time being spent in going to and from work."

Chocolate Magnate's Death Ruled Suicide

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—The death of Joseph Klaw, son of the late Marc Klaw, of the old theatrical firm of Klaw & Erlanger, was listed officially tonight as suicide. Klaw, head of a chocolate company, was found dead from exhaust fumes brought into his closed automobile by a rubber hose. No motive was disclosed.

LOG of the grandest adventure-romance in the history of the sea

Capture

Taken by a British man-o'-war, two sailors (Gary Cooper and George Raft) are sentenced to be trussed by their thumbs to the yard-arms of the war-ship.

Fire

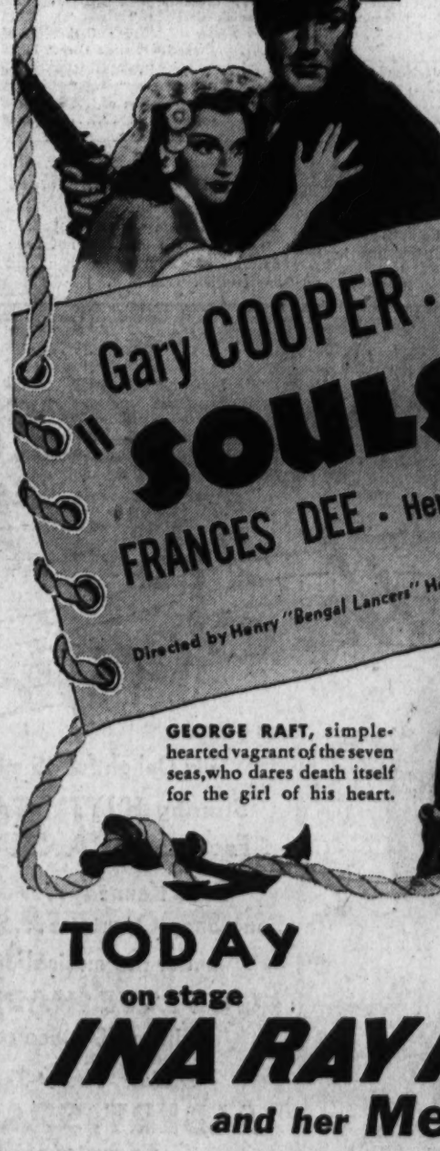
Struggle

It's a fight to the finish, with all honor gone as fear-maddened humans forget all in a wild rush for safety of the boats.

Flight

One stalwart soul, who dares death itself to bring his little life-boat of survivors across the angry wastes to safety.



GARY COOPER as the seaman who battles fire, the fury of the sea, the wrath of a world to win the woman he loves.

Premiere of Shoreham's New Spot Is Just a Week Off.

By Chanticleer

Ladies and gentlemen—just one week from tonight will see the opening of that new and fine garden of entertainment—the Blue Room, a presentation to Washington's after-dark enthusiasts by none other than L. Gardner Moore, big boss of the Shoreham Hotel.

The premiere will be appropriately set off by a special Shoreham dinner prepared personally by Jacques, the hostelry's widely known chef. Adding eye appeal to the affair will be the DeLovelies cavorting on the floor.

It is said that the Blue Room sets a new high in cost of entertainment setting in these precincts and simply is another step in the Shoreham's policy of giving the jaded fun-seeker the best. That goes for birthday and anniversary party locales as well. A sort of Shoreham Terrace moved indoors.

For those of us who don't want to wait a week for a couple of big nights, the opening of Washington's new Bamboo Gardens, at the site of the old La Paree, and the Raleigh's Fall opening of its Pall Mall Room will afford plenty of excitement. The Bamboo Gardens takes a bow Tuesday night with Russ Cullen and his orchestra featured.

• • • •

Come Thursday night and we go to the Raleigh's Pall Mall Room, where Sonny Kendis and his orchestra, direct from Manhattan's Stork Club, open the fall season in approved Raleigh fashion. For those intervals when the gentlemen of the band are getting their collective breath again, the sophisticated Charlie Wright takes over with his sophisticated songs and accordion. Further, there's the delicious cuisine under the direction of Piron, the chef who has been with General Manager Curt Schnifferler for 14 years now. He's got to be good. And he is. Finally, if it's the last little nicety in service you like, call on Marchisio, the maitre d'hotel. Ask it and it's yours. Thursday night—Pall Mall Room—Raleigh Hotel.

Judy Starr, lovely songstress with Rudy Vallee, was in town recently and dropped into the Madrillon in a sort of show-me mood. When she left town she sent a note to Johnnie Shaw saying the music was definitely okay. And another note to Peter Borras' chef saying the food was the same.

Blow hot, blow cold—and the customers continue to find that something that pleases at the Mayfair. Jack Campbell and Leo Lisee entertain.

Tip for after-theater boys and girls. Ina Ray Hutton, when in Washington for her last theater engagement, found the Ambassador's Hi-Hat a swell rendezvous. Oscar and his crew already are shining the mirrors in anticipation.

Fourth big week of Big Appling at Boulevard Farms and no let up of enthusiasm. For Big Appling as it should be done and for a swell chicken dinner, the Boulevard Farms is it. Down the big highway just below Alexandria.

• • • •

Bill Barry, the singing, playing, story-telling lad who made such a hit at the King Cole Room just a year ago, is back at the old stand. He spent the summer entertaining vacationists in New Jersey. Drop in and say hello.

• • • •

Paul Kain and his orchestra will welcome the queen of the regatta, Mary Louis Colbert, in the Metronome Room at the Wardman Park tonight. You're invited, too. Lots of nautical music. Regatta Night at the Wardman Park begins officially at 11:30 p. m. All the queen's attendants will be there, too, of course.

• • • •

It's Brinkley's for an interesting evening away from the usual bright lights and ha-cha. Just a little different, but with a nice band and plenty of skill in the work of the gentlemen behind the bar . . . For nautical atmosphere from top mast to hold, the Anchor Room at the Annapolis is your spot. Very, very new and should be included in your next itinerary of the after-darkies on the must list.

• • • •

The current Lotus Restaurant show features eight girls of the Earl Lindsay "Hits of Broadway" revue. Starred are Marion Dawn, the MacArthurs, Betty and Emmett Firestone and Felicia Shore. Bill Strickland and his orchestra for the dancing and Al Norton as master of ceremonies.

On the Air Today

Lucille Manners, Ross Graham and Rosario Bourdon and orchestra are joined again tonight for the football season by Grantland Rice, WRC, at 7. Rice will discuss Saturday's games.

• • • •

The daffy Ritz Brothers are heard in a preview of "Life Begins in College" in "Hollywood Hotel," WJSV, at 8. Tony Martin appears also as a guest attraction.

• • • •

Reginald Fortune, detective, makes his first appearance as a radio character in a new series of dramatic programs beginning at WMAL, at 9:30. Each story is complete within itself. H. C. Bailey will play the role of the British fiction detective.

• • • •

Secretary Roper will speak at WJSV, at 9:45, on "Co-ordinating Government and Business Activities." At 10:30, WRC, six Governors will be heard from the Interstate Commission on Crime Dinner, from Kansas City.

• • • •

Frisco Blaze Oamage Set at $100,000; 15 Hur

San Francisco, Sept. 23 (AP).—Damage from the oil-fed fire in San Francisco's industrial section last night was les sthan $100,000, Standard Oil Co. officials said today. Approximately 80,000 gallons of oil were consumed and two tanks and a loading station were destroyed.

Origin of the first had not been determined. Fourten firemen and one civilian were hurt.

Roads Bureau Gets Final Plan Of Taft Bridge

More Funds Are Provided; Call for Bids Awaits Draft's Approval.

Final draft of plans for the construction of a new bridge across Rock Creek south of the Shoreham Hotel and close by the Taft Bridge was placed before engineers of the Bureau of Public Roads yesterday.

A. E. Demaray, acting director of the National Park Service, announced the allocation of $25,000 in addition to the already available fund of $87,000 for the project.

Bids for the construction will be advertised by the Bureau of Public Roads as soon as the plans are approved.

Plans to move the old bridge to a position which will enable traffic to flow during the construction are being considered by park officials.

Bids for grading the new highway connecting Columbia Island and the Arlington Memorial Bridge with the will be advertised next week by the Lee boulevard near Fort Myer, Va., Bureau of Public Roads. An overpass is no wunder construction spanning the railroad tracks that lead to Rosslyn.

Waterside Drive which connects Massachusettes avenue and Rock Creek and Potomac drives was reopened yesterday following repairs. Morrow drive leading from Sixteenth street near the reservoir into the Rock Creek highway will be closed today for repairs.

Denhardt Buried; Myers Threatened

Bowling Green, Ky., Sept. 23 (AP). Flanked by the friends and political associates of happier days, the body of Brig. Gen. Henry H. Denhardt was buried today.

As the funeral cortege of the former lieutenant governor and adjutant general moved slowly through the streets of his native city, threats of further tragedy were heard.

Rodes K. Myers, who was with the general in Shelbyville Monday night when he was shot to death, on the eve of his second trial for the murder of Mrs. Verna Garr Taylor, said he would return to Shelbyville tomorrow for the examining trial of Jack, Roy and Dr. E. S. Garr, charged with the revenge murder of the general. Myers said yesterday he had received three letters threatening his life if he returned for the trial.

Netherlands to Draft More Youth for Army

The Hague, The Netherlands, Sept. 23 (AP).—The government of The Netherlands introduced a bill in Parliament today to increase the quota of the annual military training draft from 19,500 youths to 32,000. It also provided for doubling the period of infantry training from 5½ months to 11 months, and for the abolition of some exemptions.

Queen Wilhelmina told Parliament last Tuesday that "owing to the international tension and the risk of entanglements for The Netherlands and the East Indies, important proposals for strengthening the defensive forces will be forwarded immediately."

First Man Becomes Mt. Holyoke President

South Hadley, Mass., Sept. 23 (U.P.). On the threshold of its second century Mount Holyoke, America's oldest women's college, today inducted its first man president, Dr. Roswell Gray Ham, 46.

Appointment of Dr. Ham in June, 1936, to succeed Retiring President Mary Emma Woolley created a year-long controversy among alumnae, some of whom believed Mount Holyoke should uphold tradition and elect a woman.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Wives Present United Front in Voting for Gallantry, As Opposed to Tidiness, in Husbands.

COLUMNIST'S NOTE: Is a wife subscribing to a false standard of values in preferring gallantry to tidiness in her husband? The question was raised here last Monday, September 20, by a man reader of this column who had been told by a married woman of his acquaintance that she "had far rather a man open an automobile door for me and help me to alight (supposing he were my husband) than that he hang up his wet towel after the bath, stow away his soiled linens in the laundry bag, and hang up his own clothes." The man asked: "Don't you think the lady's standard of values is false? Doesn't it strike you she is afflicted with a strong malady of 'manneritis?'" He asked for a discussion of "this moot subject." The following letters give the feminine point of view.

* * * *

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Please let me say a few words to Mr. "Towel Hanger-Upper," and put him wise to one of the little points in feminine psychology he doesn't seem to know about. He asks, in his somewhat exasperated letter of September 20, if a man who picks up after himself and does other little, thoughtful labor-saving jobs for his wife in the home, isn't showing the most genuine brand of consideration. But here is where he has missed the point:

* * * *

A woman not only wants to be loved, but she wants the world to know she is loved. It is her crown of glory. Now, picking up towels, putting shoes away in the closet and hanging neckties neatly on the rack, are not exactly acts of public homage. And no one outside the privacy of the home knows about it, unless he himself brags of it to the general public.

* * * *

On the other hand, the opening of doors, helping with wraps, placing chairs and so forth shows to all and sundry observers that he is rendering gallant, eager homage to the queen of his heart. After this has been plainly demonstrated to everyone's satisfaction, wifey does not in the least mind picking up after the careless, somewhat disorderly big boy whose courtly manners she is so proud of in company. FEMINA.

* * * *

Claims "Perfect Husband."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I've always thought my husband was one in a million, but the letter from Mr. "Towel Hanger-Upper" published in your column of September 20 brought home to me the realization that he is as nearly perfect as a man could possibly be. The only job I have is keeping house, which I do very poorly. But my husband hangs up his own clothes, puts his laundry away, returns his house slippers to their rightful place and does all the little things which save me endless steps each day.

* * * *

I never have to put his soiled linens in the laundry bag, or go through his pockets when I send things to the cleaner. He hangs the bath towels to dry, leaves the bathroom as spick-and-span as he finds it, and does many other things which I would willingly accept as my work if he didn't do them. Such neatness seems to be as natural to him as breathing.

* * * *

And yet—he opens doors for me to pass through first, carries any little packages I happen to have and is in all ways as considerate of me as any woman would wish. However, if I am getting out of a car and he is staying in to go farther, he doesn't get out to open the door for me. I would consider it silly, with the traffic situation what it is.

* * * *

Now, to answer "Towel Hanger-Upper's" question: I'm a lazy woman, and would dislike the idea of having to pick up after an untidy man, but still, I think I would rather do that than live with a husband who neglected to show me unfailing politeness. I am a Southern girl, so that may exeplain why I prefer politeness to perfection. I hope my husband never changes and, believe me, I am very grateful for his being the way he is.

* * * *

He has a sense of humor, lets me handle the money, run the kitchen as I like and come and go as I please. He squires me when he can, likes me to dress well and have my hair coiffed in the latest fashion. Am I not blessed indeed? We are not on our honeymoon, either. I'm 31 years old and he is a little older.

INCOGNITO.

She Wants Gallantry.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Your column of September 20 interested me. I happen to be from the South, but I married a Northern man. However, he is extremely thoughtful in such matters as opening car doors, bringing me occasional "I-love-you" presents, and telling me how lucky he was to get me for a wife. I must confess he doesn't always remember to hang up his clothes and pick up the bath mat. We both work, so Mr. "Towel Hanger-Upper" will no doubt pity poor me, a tired wife having to come home and pick up after my untidy husband.

* * * *

But it so happens that I don't feel that way about it. The men with whom I work all day are interested in keeping their office affairs straight and so they do all those things which, in an office, corresponds to hanging up towels at home. Consequently, when I get home I am very thankful to be associated with a man who does flattering, inconsequential things because he really cares for me—instead of forever tidying up because he likes a neat house.

* * * *

Oh, well. I'm only 20; still young enough to be romantic; and maybe I'll change my mind before I celebrate my golden wedding anniversary! SOUTHERN MADAM.

Modernism Marks Paris Gown Exhibit

Paris (AP).—Tomorrow's modernism is on view in the forms and the frocks that fill the Pavillon de L'elegance where top-notch dressmakers of the French capital are staging their own big show, in the midst of the exposition.

The forms are made of plaster in bisque pink. They are elongated mannequins that strike unusual attitudes, some reclining, others standing with raised arms. They have no features, just rough plaster faces. Coiffures, however, are coiled and curled to the last plaster hair.

Only two or three mannequins are allotted each exhibitor. All are costumed for evening.

The slim upright figures are wrapped around and around with sculptured draperies that are finished in scarf-like ends that sweep the ground.

Self-Complacent Wives and Superficial Methods of Living Help Disrupt Marriage, Says Adviser on Family Problems

Mrs. Rose Ohaus, Strong Advocate of Love in a Cottage.

By Malvina Lindsay.

AMERICAN women have been told for so long how wonderful they are that far too many of them have come to believe it. So now, feminine smugness has become one of the major causes of wrecked homes in the middle class brackets, according to Mrs. Rose M. Ohaus, assistant commissioner of social service in Kansas City, who has been visiting in Washington.

Mrs. Ohaus should know about such things, for in her 25 years of social service work a large part of her time has been given to straightening out marital difficulties. While her work now covers a wide range of welfare supervision, yet she cannot escape her old speciality. Her office is usually filled with a line of aggrieved husbands and wives who want to tell their sides of the old story of domestic misunderstanding. Wrangling couples from higher stratas of society who want more exclusive counsel come to her home at night. Smilingly and graciously she gives of her time, in office hours and out of them, working at her pet hobby of salvaging disrupted homes.

Men More Alert.

Looking over the present situation, Mrs. Ohaus views with uneasiness the "amazing self-assurance" of wives who are placed in comfortable circumstances.

"The modern well-to-do woman is too complacent," she said, "She is not keeping up with her husband. In almost any social group the men are usually more alert, more on their toes mentally than the women. Even when they come home tired from work and have to dress and go out socially, they still carry with them the sense of being vitally interested in what is going on about them.

"Too many wives remain little home-town girls. It isn't that they don't keep up superficially. They patronize the beauty shops and they wear the latest styles. They may even belong to clubs and study circles. But they live in little shells of self-interest and are not alert nor concerned over what does not affect them personally. Their husbands are out daily matching their wits in the world and getting a broader perspective. The wife who would keep up a real sense of companionship with her husband should enlarge her interests. Otherwise, no matter how attractive she may be on the outside, she is likely to be a good deal of a bore to her husband."

Keep up with your husband mentally and learn to cook if you would be a successful wife, says Mrs. Rose M. Ohaus, assistant commissioner of public welfare of Kansas City.

But what about men preferring dumb women? How could Mrs. Ohaus reconcile that axiom with her theory?

"I don't believe for a minute that men prefer stupid women," she said. A husband just endures a dumb wife. He doesn't delight in her. In my own experience, it has been lack of brains on the part of the wife rather than a surfeit of them that has caused the trouble."

Jealousy, the surface cause of many a wrecked home is largely a mental disease, Mrs. Ohaus believes.

"All women have to fight the bugbear of jealously," she said. "It dogs their footsteps in their marriage relationships. It is seldom well-founded. Men as a rule do not have the heart crushes their wives credit them with. The other woman—or the other man—usually looms on the field only after discontent at home has developed."

In homes that are not well-to-do, domestic problems center to a large extent around unemployment and the attendant difficulty of in-laws, Mrs. Ohaus finds. That was especially true during the depression. On account of strained finances, many families had to double up in living quarters and that often led to strife.

Crowded living conditions always make marriage adjustment difficult, Mrs. Ohaus believes. Two thing she maintains, are more essential to married happiness—that the couple live apart from relatives no matter how humble the living conditions must be, and that there be enough space in the home to permit each individual some measure of privacy.

Privacy Important.

"Every soul," she said, "needs its place of sanctuary, no matter how simple. Every person needs some little place in which to go apart to console the soul. That is why I think a marriage has a greater chance of enduring in a house than in a small apartment or kitchenette. I am a strong believer in home owning for young people. Nothing sets a man up so much as a little place to which he can come home in the evening and feel himself monarch of all he surveys."

Paradoxically, Mrs. Ohaus, advocating the theory of wives "keeping up with the world" mentally, also stresses the fundamentals of old-fashioned homemaking. Chief of these is the ability to cook.

"For 25 years I have been urging wives to learn to cook," she said, "and I am still doing so. Women should never forget that food plays an important part in the life of any man—or anyone else for that matter—and that one of the best means of drawing a husband home is the knowledge that a good dinner will be awaiting him.

"A marriage built around the solid features of home life, around a garden, flowers, community life, church-going, and of course, good housekeeping, is more likely to survive than one that centers around more transient interests. That is why I do not believe in the wife working if it can possibly be avoided. My pet theory is that a young couple starting out should buy a home with a small plot of ground and the wife put into her homemaking and gardening, preserving and canning, the energy she would expend in a small paid industrial job She will contribute more in the long run to the family income and the marriage relation in this way. And she will forge more permanent ties between herself and her husband."

Preventing Injuries.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Athletic injuries, especially on the football field, are preventable to a considerable extent. As has been pointed out here in previous years, the proportion of injuries in college and university football is far smaller than in secondary schools. The reason is plain that the higher schools have more careful and more experienced trainers, and they exercise more control over their athletes.

The little boy should go into football very slowly and by degrees, only as he gets hard. Young bones and tendons are fragile and stretch, and then sometimes snap.

Thorough preliminary training is a requisite too often neglected in the lower schools, or in little boys' football teams. There, too, the tendency for players to keep on, after they are exhausted, leads to many unnecessary injuries.

The concept of safety in athletics does not call for the restriction of those spectacular feats which constitute the fascination of sport for the spectator and player alike. On the contrary, it embodies those tested precautions which enable a player to perform in the most spectacular and effective fashion with greater ease and with less chance of his play being suspended, impaired or stopped.

The first consideration is the player's condition. Proper condition means better co-ordination, which tends to prevent injuries, as well as the ability to withstand strains better and resistance to complications. A thorough medical examination is, of course, an absolute requirement before playing football ar basketball.

If a player loses weight or tires easily, this calls for a very special medical examination. If a player falls sick, he should recondition himself gradually before he returns to play, starting with short periods of mild exercise.

Next in importance to training are protective devices. The one device which is universally recognized for every player of every sort is the athlete's supporter.

Strapping with adhesive plaster and bandaging with or without pads of various kinds, are important and effective measures.

Strapping and bandaging weak spots, such as the knee and ankle, before entering playing, may prevent long invalidism.

Other protective devices, such as sliding pads, head guards, shoulder pads and masks vary with the game and position played. Most players know what their individual play calls for, but sometimes one will neglect to provide it. This is particularly true of secondary school football, on account of the expense of these devices. But they pay for themselves in the long run.

Parents should particularly insist on proper safety precautions for secondary school football players, because that is where most of the injuries occur.

Your Figure, Madame!

Overeating Fattens Hips but Dieting Won't Reduce Them.

By Ida Jean Kain.

SO YOU WANT to do something about your hips?

The combination of sea breeze, or perhaps it was mountain air, and good cooking put ten pounds on your silhouette—seven on the hipline.

When ever you overeat you can count on gaining in the hips, but when it comes to slimming down, that takes exercise. Dieting won't help you lose those same seven pounds.

In streamlining the hips, your exercise program must be fairly comprehensive, for the hip problems vary. Hips may bow out at the sides in pincushion bulges, or assume a desk chair spread, or a bustle effect. For this reason hip-slimming exercises must tone the musculature of the hips, thighs and buttocks.

The two following exercises punish the fat pads along the sides of the hips:

Position: Lying flat on back on the floor, body stretched to full extension, with hands clasped behind the heal to act as a buffer.

Movement: Roll over to one side, pillowing the head on the crooked elbow, then back to the other side.

Position: Lying flat on back on floor, knees flexed and feet flat on floor, hands clasped back of head.

Movement: Roll over until the right thigh is resting on the floor. Roll back and across the buttocks until you are resting on the opposite thighline.

The next exercise will streamline the hips, thighs and posterior:

Position: Squat down on the floor with knees outspread and heels together. Place the hands on the floor in front of the knees for support.

Movement: Transferring most of the weight to the hands, take a quick jump backward, stretching the legs wide apart and straightening the knees. Jump again, and return to position. Repeat twelve times, later twenty-five. Rest after each five jumps.

To reduce an outward curve of the posterior, tone the muscles which form the buttocks, as in this exercise:

Position: Lie face downward on the floor, stretched to full length and with the knees straight.

Movement: Without bending the knee, slowly raise the left leg high in the air, tensing all the muscles. Hold for a second and gradually lower to the floor. Keep the knee straight throughout the exercise. Repeat 10 times, alternating the legs. Later perform 20 times.

The hipline is usually the first measurement to show a gain—and the last to slim down, unless you exercise.

New Rubber Tile Has Vivid Colors

Vivid and unusual colorings characterize the new patterns in rubber tile floorings which are being featured in many of the New York shops with the annual autumn showings of model homes.

Originally regarded as only suitable for bathrooms and kitchens, these rubber tile floorings have gained definite acceptance among leading decorators for breakfast rooms, dens and game rooms and sun porches. In the South, where Spanish interiors are so much in vogue, rubber tile flooring is frequently used throughout the lower floors to replace the customary ceramic tile, which is difficult to keep in condition.

In one showing of fall interiors held by a well-known Fifth avenue house, a group of new rubber tile floorings were used to create striking color harmonies in several of the more informal rooms. The breakfast room and kitchen floors of this model home were covered with a plain rubber tile in a shade of blue reminiscent of the Italian lakes.

'Feminine' Girl Advised to Go Slow on Frills

FEMININE women should beware of frills; women of the more tailored type of looks should go in for them. This unusual advice comes from Dolly Tree, costume designer for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

"Very feminine women realize that they definitely harm their appearance when they load themselves with lace and ribbons," said Miss Tree. "The more feminine a girl for whom I am designing, the more masculine I make her clothes. This brings out the femininity.

"Just as this is so of the feminine type, the more tailored girl can wear fluffy frocks without becoming a dresser-top doll.

"Nothing is so becoming to the woman who is a bit heavy as a well-draped gown. The proper draping can make her figure appear slim and svelte.

"All of these things are in reach of every woman, if they want to give themselves time and study. Girls appearing on the screen realize this fact. They know which lines are good for them, and which are not.

"Color is another important phase in reach of every woman everywhere. One important thing to remember is never to outshine personality with color. Only the very vivid, intense girl should wear red. In every case the person herself should be seen before the color of her dress is noted.

"This not only goes for color, but design as well. A gown should never be so spectacular that it detracts from the person wearing it. Attention to such details cannot help but emphasize the good points of a woman, and not a woman lives who hasn't at least one good point to stress."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Sept. 23.

A VIGOROUS campaign is being waged here to take the "glamour girl" off the front pages and replace her with the career girl—the young lady who makes a very good thing of earning a living and enjoying a pleasant private life at the same time.

ALICE HUGHES.

Julia Coburn, who is one of the heads of the new School for Fashion Careers, has checked no fewer tha 1,000 girls whose little hearts are set on business lives, and this is her composite picture of them.

Height, 5 feet 5; weight, 110; age, 24; education, at least 2 or 3 years in college plus special courses in one of the arts; hobbies, riding, tennis or photography; favorite magazines, Vogue, Harper's Bazaar, Reader's Digest, New Yorker, Life. She reads at least two newspapers daily. She expects to marry and have two children, but keep on working indefinitely. She has a working knowledge of French. She has been to Europe, and she spends an average of $250 a year on clothes.

* * * *

Well, those are the specifications of a young business girl according to Julia's researches. Very sound and interesting, too—and yet I am filled with doubts about the matter. I have a low, evil feeling that the great mass of girls would rather look like Marlene Dietrich and have Bobby Hutton's money. Will the career girl really supplant the glamour girl? Very sorry—but not in my book!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—One of my friends lives at the big apartment house labeled 1 University place, and that is also the town residence of Luise Rainer and husband, Clifford Odets, the playwright, when they are among us. This chap has the good luck to ride the elevator often with the dewy little Luise, and he says it is a pleasure. He has even reached the smiling and nodding stage with the star. He says she doesn't overdo the dressing and grooming, as do most film stars, but does look very lovely—and he's telling us. He hopes they'll be speaking before she has to dash to Hollywood again!

* * * *

Miss G. B. Stern, that excellent British penwoman, has just published a grand new book, "Oleander River," a yarn set in romantic Provence. Everyone who read her amazing biography, "Monogram," will leap for the new one, and not be let down, either.

Local restaurants are in a great stage of fretment, owing to the current high price of sirloin steak. The popular-priced eating houses fear they will have to go in for stews instead of steaks—a terrible blow to the meat lovers. But the Government says that prices will be down again by Christmas, which gives the landlords some hope. A sirloin has to sell at $.90 an order here now to make any profit at all for the restaurateur—and that's a heavy tap.

* * * *

By now it seems to be safe to say that the current American Legion convention is the most spectacular in the outfit's colorful history. Certainly the lads—and their ladies—have captured the town, lock, stock and Radio City.

* * * *

Now they're turning psychiatrists loose on the school kids here. No less than 18 of them are going to keep an eye on pupils' home life, just to see how they make out with ma and pa. I wonder what will happen to the skulls of the juniors now?

* * * *

October is going to be a great month for local hair, it seems. I learn that no less than 20,000 hairdressers are going to convene here then to discuss ways and means of fixing coiffures in new and thrilling ways. All I can say is that they'll have to go some to top a perfect and beautiful page-boy bob. I think these are honeys, when smartly done!

Plaids a Foot Square Mark Fashion Shows

Paris (AP).—Scotch plaids with designs a foot square stepped out in fall fashion shows. Bigger plaids have never been seen here nor smarter effects obtained from their use.

Paris is putting them into new loose topcoats. Some are made with a foot-wide box pleat straight down the back, taking in "squarely" the whole plaid pattern. Even suits are being turned out, jackets and skirts, in these oversized plaid woolens.

Not all the winter plaids reach these striking dimensions. Small women may be accommodated with patterns better adapted to their slight figures, or change to checked wools. These appear again in jackets for wear with plain skirts, or they line fur coats and make checked berets to top them. In the stripe category are mixed stripe suitings, mannish leaves, and pencil woolens, all for strict tailor-made styles.

Autumn Puts Society Into New Home Whirl

Wadsworths Buy Old Davison Place on N Street; Robert H. Jacksons Will Live in Thorpe House on Woodley Road.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Fall no sooner gets under way than reports of house sales, leases and moving plans break out as big news. To social Washington a change of residence frequently means a change of social centers and when the time for dealing out calling cards comes around, Milady must know who has moved where, and if possible, when.

Friends of Representative and Mrs. James W. Wadsworth will call on them at 3263 N street this year. They have bought the house that belonged to F. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War in Hoover's Administration. It is probable that their son, Reverdy Wadsworth, and his bride, the former Eleanor Roosevelt, will visit there frequently this winter.

HOPE R. MILLER.

The residence is one in a row of beautiful homes, many of which are old and historic, with stone steps leading up to classic doordays. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Coolidge lived in the Dadison house when Mr. Coolidge was Undersecretary of the Treasury, and more recently it was the address of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence M. C. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson (he's Assistant Attorney General) have leased Mrs. George Thorpe's house on Woodley road and, doubtlessly, will be moving in before long. Mrs. Thorpe has taken an apartment at 1660 Crescent place and plans to be there most of the winter.

The Dwight E. Davis house on Kalorama road has been leased to Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Ely, jr., who will be a distinctive addition to Washington social circles. During the latter part of the summer, Miss Helen Davis stayed in her father's house while she studied for the Foreign Service examinations. Curtailing her vacation, the indefatigable daughter of Mr. Davis turned thumbs down on enjoying the fun on Long Island, came to the Capital and lived in the house right through the heat wave while she prepared for the stiff tests that her elder sister, Cynthia, took last year.

When Mr. and Mrs. Davis (she was formerly Mrs. Charles Sabin, as everyone knows) return from Southampton, they will be in their magnificent home on Foxhall road, where they lived last winter.

Ambasasdor Dodd Visits Richmond

The United States Ambassador to Germany, William Edward Dodd, who has been vacationing at Stoneleigh, his country estate near Purcellville, Va., has gone to Richmond to spend the weekend as guest of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Oscar C. Gregory.

As is always the case when Mr. Dodd visits Richmond where he is widely known, as elsewhere, as a historian and teacher who can talk eloquently on subjects particularly dear to the hearts of Virginians, he has been urged to lecture during this visit. So tomorrow evening, he will appear as guest speaker at a meeting in Cannon Memorial Chapel at the University of Richmond.

Following his week-end visit in Richmond he will return to his country estate to spend some time before returning to his post in Berlin.

Paging Shylock For Horses and Ships

What horses have to do with boats, I can't say. But so far as I can figure it, there's some connection between the two. Here's why. In my mail yesterday there was a unique but mysterious invitation—a sheet of paper, bearing a map of sorts and the announcement of a boat party next Tuesday. The only signature was a telephone number—Republic 0054, and there was a suggestion that I call it, state my name and say "Yes or no—that's all." Informal? Very.

Anyway, there were arrows and a red line, tracing a path through the map and to a boat-shaped outline labeled "Good Ship Hobby." And thereby hangs a horse show. That is, I think so.

A call to the number in question failed to clear up the mystery, but my memory did me a better turn. Some where, I'd heard that headquarters of the Inter-American Horse Show headquarfirst number of the new telephone exchange—Republic. An inquiry to "Information" regarding the telephone number of the Inter-American Horse Show headquarters brought the answer—"REpublic 0054. So, it seems, the mysterious boat party, the "Good Ship Hobby" and the I. A. H. S. are all tied up together somehow. Just how, we'll see next Tuesday. Clever people, these promoters.

Miss Preston Is Married to Carolina Man

Daughter of Official Will Make Her Home in Winston-Salem.

Miss Cortlandt Preston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Preston, of Washington, and a frequent visitor here, became the bride of John Spach Creech, of Winston-Salem, in a ceremony performed yesterday afternoon in Charlotte, N. C. The vows were said before Dr. Edgar Gammon, pastor of Myers Park Presbyterian Church, in his study. Only members of the two families and intimate friends were present.

For her wedding Mrs. Creech wore a dary gray tailored suit with gray accessories, a blouse of mahogany satin and a gray pokebonnet hat with a veil. Her corsage was of orchids.

The bride is a graduate of Salem College, where she received her degree of B. A. as an English major. For the past year and a half she has been campus secretary and publicity director at the college. She is the daughter of one of the Special Assistants to the Attorney General.

Mr. Creech is the son of Charles Creech, sr., and the late Mrs. Creech. He received his B. A. at Davidson College as a political science major. He is a member of Phi Gamma Delta. Mr. Creech is associated with his father in the furniture manufacturing business.

After a brief wedding trip they will make their home in Winston-Salem in the Park View Apartments.

Attending the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Preston, Washington, D. C.; Charles Creech, sr., Winston-Salem; Mr. and Mrs. Emil Shaffner, Winston-Salem; Miss Julia Preston, Washington, D. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Creech, jr., Miss Mary Creech, Miss Margaret McLean, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Garrett, John Foster, William Coan 3d, Dr. and Mrs. Howard Rondthaler, the Rev. and Mrs. Gordon Spauh, all of Winston-Salem; Mrs. Thomas Alexander, Misses Alice Alexander and Betsy Tate and Lindsay Tate, of Charlotte.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE FIRST DAYS of fall, although hotter than any in the past week or two, are bringing out the smartest of new outfits, some of which were worn by members of society who happened to be lunching yesterday at the Mayflower. And you can take a deep breath about the new hats—they are not quite so staggeringly tall, nor so befeathered, as advance reports—at least to judge by those seen yesterday.

DUDLEY HARMON.

A very distinctive one was worn by Mrs. Higginson Rogers, who lunched at a table in the corner with Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, in for the day from her Virginia place, "Merrywood." Mrs. Rogers' bonnet had a high crown, a turned up brim, and streamer effects dangling in the back. With this creation she wore a peasant-looking frock in a rust shade made with a full skirt and trimmed in black. Mrs. Auchincloss had on a two-piece black frock with a rhinestone clip at the neck and a matching hat.

Mrs. Newbold Noyes' black hat, one of the smartest in the room, jutted up in the air and then flared out at the top. A crimson insert in the crown added a lively touch, and a simple black frock completed the ensemble.

The dining room was well filled yesterday, although two of the most faithful standbys, Secretary Marvin McIntyre and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., were missing. Mr. McIntyre, whose favorite dish at the Mayflower has been named "White House stew" in his honor, left with the President on his Western trip, and the Roberts are in Atlanta, his home town, for two or three weeks.

There was much visiting between tables yesterday as everybody caught up on what everybody else had been doing for the summer. Lady Lewis, who was accompanied by Mrs. George Pulver, stopped to chat with Mrs. Auchincloss and Mrs. Rogers, who earlier had paused to say "hello" to Mrs. Noyes. Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis have returned to Washington after a stay in Maine.

• • • •

OTHERS AT the Mayflower for lunch yesterday were Senator William H. King, chairman of the District Committee, who was no doubt settling important affairs of the Capital as he lunched off filet mignon with Commissioners Hazen and Sultan; Mrs. Emil Hurja, looking very smart in a beige outfit with a little matching hat and silver fox furs; Mrs. Casenove Lee, active in efforts to restore Stratford, the birthplace of Robert E. Lee, and Stewart McDonald, Federal housing administrator.

You can always count on seeing a smattering of diplomats at the Mayflower, and yesterday the corps diplomatique was represented by the Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close, who are living there until the furniture arrives for their new legation, and the Charge d'Affaires of the German Embassy, Dr. Hans Thomsen, and the First Secretary, Herbert Scholz, who were speaking German with a group of their countrymen.

Mrs. Morris Sheppard, wife of the Senator from Texas, was entertaining an out-of-town group at a luncheon table yesterday. The Sheppards had originally planned a vacation in Texarkana, but the Senator's illness prevented their getting away.

Their home town, incidentally, is thus named because half of it is in Arkansas and the other half in Texas.

• • • •

Our face is red all over this morning because a hitherto infallible source was wrong for once, and we printed yesterday that the Secretary of War, Harry H. Woodring, was not a member of the American Legion. As a matter of fact, he is not only a very active member, but was for a time commander of the Kansas group. Therefore, our apologies, Mr. Secretary!

Officials View Regatta Battle From Sequoia

Yacht Stands By as Sea Fight of Yesteryear Is Re-enacted.

ALTHOUGH THE good yacht Sequoia was not in the Regatta "sea fight" last night at the Water Gate, where the shade of John Paul Jones is reported to have said "I have not yet begun to shoot fireworks," it was very much in the limelight. Aboard it were the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles A. Edison, who had as guests the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. William D. Leahy, the Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, and the brother and sister of the Assistant Secretary, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore M. Eidson, of Orange, N. J.

Anchored a short distance away, another official yacht, the Milan, named for the birthplace of the late Thomas A. Edison, also was crowded to the gunwales with spectators among them Rear Admiral and Mrs. George Pettengill and Commander and Mrs. Harold Nelson.

A Main Event Tomorrow Night

One of the bounding main events of regatta week will take place tomorrow night, after the Bonhomme Richard and the Serapis have stopped throwing Roman candles at each other. This will be the big Press Club banquet, at which Mrs. Eleanor Patterson will present to the regatta association a replica of the President's Gold Cup. The winner of the regatta will it to hold indefinitely on Saturday. The original trophy, for which the late President Coolidge went on the Gold Cup standard in 1926, only stays with the No. 1 racer for one year.

Invitations were in the mail man's bag yesterday for a cocktail party scheduled to take place just before the banquet, and at which Mrs. Eleanor Patterson and Mrs. William C. Shelton are to be hostesses. So, with water, water everywhere there's still a drop to drink.

With the speedboat races reserved for this part of the week, a lot of eyes will be watching Count Theo Rossi di Montelara, of Martini and Rossi fame (refer to your labels), who is taking a prominent part in this class, and who got into Washington yesterday morning. With him is his friend, Signor Guido Cattaneo. The Count has just won the second prize in the Detroit Gold Cup race, where he managed to make his craft shove 90 miles an hour. Warning: Show your medals but be sure they're pinned on tight.

Count Praises Capital City

The handsome bachelor Count says this is one of the loveliest cities he ever has visited, and with a waving gesture of his hand, he adds, that all American women are beauties.

Count Rossi has been active in boat racing for nine years and for that reason prefers to live in Turin, which has been his home for the past 14 years, where there is a lake. As he has come to Washington solely for the regatta he will leave as soon as it is over for New York, where he will remain until October 9, when both he and Signor Cattaneo will sail for Italy on the Conte di Savoia.

During his few days stay here he will see his old friends, Capt. Cugia and Prince Del Drago, of the Italian Embassy. He saw Signor Suvich, the Italian Ambassador, yesterday evening, and last night he attended the regatta naval battle between the Serapis and the Bonhomme Richard.

Virginian Weds In New York

There's a decided Washington angle to the marriage Wednesday in New York of Miss Natica Peabody, daughter of Mrs. Vivian Spencer, of 340 Park avenue, and George Russell Peabody, of New York, to Beverly Kennon Sinclair, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Wright Sinclair, of Alexandria, Va. Mr. Sinclair, whose mother was Corinne Swann, of Virginia, is a cousin of Mrs. George Barnett, of this city, and attended Friends School here.

The ceremony took place in the chantry of St. Thomas Church, the rector, the Rev. Roelif H. Brooks, officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her mother, had no attendants. She wore a sapphire blue velvet gown with a matching hat and a corsage of white orchids. Arthur Sinclair served as his cousin's best man.

The bride is a granddaughter of Mrs. John Henry Clews, of New York and the late Mr. Clews, and attended the Warrenton Country Day School in Warrenton and Spence School in New York.

Envoy and Wife Return Tuesday

The German Ambassador and Frau Dieckhoff will land in New York Monday on the Europa and will come to Washington Tuesday. They will be accompanied by their daughter, Fraulein Lotte Dieckhoff, a young lady of about 16, who remained in Germany when her father and mother came to this country last year.

On October 3 the Ambassador will go to New York to make an address that evening in Madison Square Garden in celebration of German Day.

The First Secretary of the embassy, Herbert Scholz, has returned from a vacation in his country and is staying at the Chevy Chase Club until Frau Scholz joins him in November.

Miss Boardman, National Red Cross Secretary, To Help District Chapter With Roll Call

Noted Leader to Have Charge of Booths, Special Memberships.

Those in charge of the roll call of the District of Columbia Red Cross have received news with much satisfaction that Miss Mabel T. Boardman, secretary of the National Red Cross, will enlist in the activities of the District chapter. This announcement was made yesterday by Marcy L. Sperry, chairman of the roll call.

Miss Boardman, who always has given valiant service to the District chapter, will have charge of all Red Cross booths and will direct enrollment of special memberships. She will be assisted by Mrs. Ernest J. Swift, wife of the National Red Cross vice chairman. Miss Boardman and Mrs. Swift have enlisted a corps of helpers who will be in charge of the booths planned for larger banks and hotels.

The District of Columbia chapter, under the leadership of Miss Boardman, during the World War was the model chapter. It was this chapter which first had a uniformed corps of workers. Miss Boardman and her war-time assistants spent many hours in the District of Columbia Red Cross headquarters, then the Wadsworth House, now the Sulgrave Club, consulting on design and materials for the uniforms. Soon women of official, social and diplomatic circles and other Washington women were to be seen all over Washington at any hour of the day or night in their fluttering veils and crisp Red Cross aprons and dresses, motor corps uniforms, and the striped uniforms and blue coats lined with red of the canteen service.

Wore Uniform Herself.

Miss Boardman wore a uniform herself and directed the work of the Red Cross corps of other cities as part of her duties as secretary. Her offices in the National Red Cross Building teemed with activity.

It was Miss Boardman who set the example by plying a broom to clean the floors where Red Cross packing of candy and comfort bags for the men was in progress. Soon many eager hands were sweeping, rolling bandages and making surgical dressings and hospital garments, cooking, and scrubbing floors and counters of canteen centers.

Washington remembers Miss Boardman when, appointed by President Taft, she took over the work of re-organization of the Red Cross. Every morning Miss Boardman, clad in the trim shirtwaist and skirt of the businesswoman of that day, hurried with the throng of Government clerks for the small Red Cross offices in the State War and Navy Building. She kept Government hours, except that she remained many hours after Government clerks had gone home.

MISS MABEL T. BOARDMAN.

World War Work.

When the World War began, Miss Boardman hurried back from her summer home in Murray Bay, Canada, to take part in the work of the "Greatest Mother of them all," the American Red Cross. Red Cross headquarters then were at the corner of Seventeenth and H streets northwest, and Miss Boardman and other officials worked day and night before and after the United States entered the war. It was a day of great rejoicing when the Red Cross moved into the handsome marble headquarters on the Mall, and Miss Boardman was established in her suite of offices there. Many entertainments and meetings took place at her home near Dupont Circle.

In speaking of her the late President and Chief Justice, William Howard Taft, said:

"We cannot think of the Red Cross without thinking of Miss Boardman. We cannot think of Miss Boardman without thinking of the Red Cross."

During the 40 years of her work with the Red Cross Miss Boardman has received many honors from her own and other governments.

Once Was Commissioner.

In receiving Miss Boardman's acceptance of the District of Columbia "roll call to arms," Mr. Sperry said:

"It is fortunate we have been able to secure the assistance of Miss Boardman. As a lifelong resident of Washington, she is naturally anxious to see the District lead the country in roll-call response."

Miss Boardman is the only woman ever to be Commissioner of the District of Columbia, having been appointed by Woodrow Wilson in the last days of his Administration. During her incumbency Miss Boardman made a study of the institutions of the District and gave much of her time to work for their betterment.

Y.W.C.A. Group Off Today for Kamp Kahlert

50 Members Will Leave at 4 P. M. for the Annual Fall Conference.

MORE THAN 50 members of the Young Women's Christian Association board of directors, committees and staff will leave this afternoon for Kamp Kahlert, the Y. W. C. A. summer camp on West River, in response to the invitation extended by their president, Mrs. William Lee Corbin, to attend the annual fall setting-up conferences. They will depart from the administration building at Seventeenth and K streets at 4 o'clock.

Under the direction of Dr. Anne Seesholtz, the program chairman for the conference, an educational congress has been planned.

Mrs. William Adams Slade will act as schoolmistress in this evening's meeting, which will be in the form of a "practice school" on the subject of "Measuring the C in Our Y. W. C. A." The whole class will participate in answering the question, "What in our practice and program is definitely Christian?" Mrs. Ernest E. Denly, Miss Elizabeth Morrow and Mrs. Frederick Felker will present their ideas from the viewpoint of the general Y. W. C. A. in three-minute talks. This will be followed by a general discussion to carry further the school theme.

This part of the program will close with the traditional Kahlert Kamp Fire, planned this year by Misses Mary Burnett, music secretary; Mabel Cook, Girl Reserve secretary; Edith Dawson, of the religious life committee, and Mrs. Virginia Sholar, recreation secretary.

On Saturday morning the Town Hall will discuss "Measuring the Nationality Groups in Our Y. W. C. A." Miss Adelaida Aceves, who is sent from Mexico City to associate with the staff for three months; Mrs. Caroline Day, of the Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. Charles J. Damas (Greek); Mrs. Edward Kaprelian (Armenian), and others will address the group.

At 10:45 Mrs. Fred E. Wright will lead the services of worship after which the board and committee members will return to the city. The staff will remain at Kamp over Sunday in order to discuss fall programs, particularly problems within themselves and other matters pertaining strictly to the staff.

On Tuesday, the all-member meeting will be held in Barker Hall, with the subject, "Group Work in Social Reconstruction."

State Officers' Board Names Daughters of America Workers

Law, Credentials, Legislation, Benevolent and Good of Order Committees Are Named; Temple Plans Made.

Law—Mrs. Grace Roberts, Mrs. Renna Corry, Mrs. Mary Hansen.

Good of Order—Mrs. Edna H. Gaither, Mrs. Maybelle Bernard, Mrs. Nicie Payton.

Mrs. Edna Gaither, chairman of the State council good of the order committee, has requested that each council send to her the name of their good workers for the general good of the order committee.

State Councilor Viola Henley is offering a personal gift to the council having the highest per cent of their own members out during the nine months from October 1 to July 1.

The board laid out a skeleton plan for the D. of A. Temple building fund and has named the following council chairmen, who will appoint lieutenants to ascertain that their councils will do toward a home for the organization: Mrs. Grace Ricketts, No. 1; Mrs. Ethel Joiner, No. 2; Mrs. Naomi Swann, No. 3; Mrs. Mabel Downing, No. 4; Mrs. Josephine Herbert, No. 5; Mrs. Emma Raymond, No. 6; Mrs. Ruth Boswell, No. 7; Mrs. Louise Schwenk, No. 8; Mrs. Rose Wells, No. 9; Mrs. Margaret Taylor, No. 10; Mrs. Hattie Ruppart, No. 11; Mrs. Mildred Rock, No. 12; Mrs. Ethel Keefe, No. 13; Mrs. Mary P. James, No. 14; Mrs. Ruth Brady, No. 15; Mrs. Marie Jones, No. 16; Mrs. Laura Milbourn, No. 17; Mrs. Edna Hayward, No. 18; Mrs. Louise Grubbs, No. 19; Mrs. Mary Walker, No. 20; Mrs. Edna Brown, No. 21; Mrs. Lucy Hardy, No. 22; Mrs. Nella Bell, No. 23; Mrs. Pearl Kidwell, No. 24; Mrs. Maude Wine, No. 25; Mrs. Ruth Warren, No. 26, and Mrs. Edna Claflin, of Brookland Council, No. 27.

The board of officers, after careful consideration, selected the following dates for official visitations: Triumph Council, No. 8, Thursday, October 28; Kenmore Council, No. 23, November 3; Kenilworth Council, No. 13, November 9; Goodwill Council, No. 15, November 11; Friendship Council, No. 16, November 18; Anacostia Council, No. 14; December 1; Eagle Council, No. 24, December 6; Liberty Council, No. 6, December 9; Independent Council, No. 2, December 13; Star-Spangled Banner Council, No. 7, December 16.

Moose Women Postpone Rites

Senator Reynolds Is Called From the City and Is Unable to Speak.

The women of the Moose announced yesterday that the special program arranged for tonight at Moose Hall, observing the sesquicentennial of the United States Constitution has been postponed due to the fact that the principal speaker, United States Senator Robert Reynolds from North Carolina, has been unexpectedly called out of the city. The date for this program will be announced later.

The regular meeting of Columbia Chapter will be held tonight at Moose Hall, 1414 I street northwest at 8 p. m.

Miss McDougal To Be Host Today At Poetry Lunch

Miss Violet McDougal will entertain at a "poetry" luncheon which will take place today at 12:30 in the tea room at Woodward & Lothrop's. Each guest will bring one of her favorite poems and read it as part of the program. The table decorations are to be orange and white.

Among those present will be Mrs. Richard Hogue, president of the American Association of University Women; Mrs. Ruth Henderson, chairman of the poetry division of the association, and Mrs. G. B. Parker. Also Mrs. Leslie Whitten, Miss Madge Cook, Mrs. James Irwin, Mrs. Winters Haydock, Mrs. Ida Elaine James and Mrs. D. A. McDougal.

Hadassah Seeks More Members

Campaign of Junior Group Is Aimed at Goal of 16,000.

With the aim of increasing the national membership of Junior Hadassah, the Young Women's Zionist organization of America, to 16,000, the Washington unit will begin the local campaign Sunday afternoon, October 4, at 2:30 o'clock at the Jewish Community Center. An unusually fine program and tea is being planned for this opening meeting.

"Through Junior Hadassah the Jewish girl takes part in the most significant Jewish movement of modern times," Miss Sophie Baynard, president, said. "The rich store of Jewish knowledge is open to her through the organization's varied and extensive educational work. By her participation in the activities of Junior Hadassah she lends her support to the organization's work in Palestine, which is the maintenance of a model children's village, a citrus farm and nurses' training school, and participates in the land-purchasing program of the Jewish National Fund. She becomes part of a vital current in Jewish life. At the same time she enjoys the social functions of the unit and the interest and friendliness of its members."

Harris Is Heard By Quota Club

Group Holds First Meeting of Season; Miss Shipley Presides.

The Quota Club held its first meeting of the season at the Woman's City Club last night. The guest of honor and speaker was George V. Harris who spoke on the recent Rotary Club convention in Nice and his travels this summer in Europe. Miss Ruth Shipley, president of the club, presided.

The Washington Quota Club and other Quota clubs in the tenth district will be guests of the Baltimore club tomorrow night for the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the Constitution of the United States. Dr. Katherine Gallagher, professor of history at Goucher College, will make the address. Dr. Mary Powell Northam, governor of the tenth district, will preside.

Suyiches Arrive Aboard the Rex

Vittorio Mussolini Also Reaches New York.

Despite the old poem about "ships that pass in the night and never a signal in passing," most ships nowadays can hardly steam in or out of a pier without reams of words being printed about it.

Accordingly, we are "signaling" now that the Rex slipped up the North River yesterday and into New York with the Italian Ambassador and Mme. de Suvich aboard. Vittorio Mussolini, second son of the Italian Premier, was also on hand, with his suitcase labels marked for Hollywood. It seems logical, however, that he may stop in Washington en route.

Further names on the passenger list of the Rex included Dr. Vittorio Bifulco, First Secretary of the Italian Embassy, and Count Leon Fumasoni Biondi, Italian newspaper correspondent here in Washington.

Leaving New York City yesterday, the Manhattan pointed oceanward with the new United States Minister to Rumania and Mrs. Franklin Mott Gunther on deck. A Congressional contingent among the passengers included Representative and Mrs. Robert G. Allen, of Pennsylvania; Representative and Mrs. John T. Bernard, of Minnesota, and Representative and Mrs. Jerry J. O'Connell, of Montana.

Slim Countess Haugwitz von Reventlow has turned her back on the newsreel men until next time and, with Count Reventlow, sailed on the Bremen to Europe at midnight Wednesday.

Guatemala Envoy And Wife Guests At Dinner Party

The Minister of Guatemala, Dr. Don Adrian Recinos, and Senora de Recinos, were the guests for whom Senora Josephina de Zuloaga, of Caracas, Venezuela, entertained at dinner at the Shoreham last evening.

Senora de Zuloaga has been passing the summer in Washington with her son-in-law and daughter, the Counselor of the Venezuela legation and Senora de Fombona-Pachano, and she is planning to sail October 2 to return to her home in South America. The Counselor and Senora de Fombona-Pachano were among the company of dinner guests.

Merrills Return From Trip West

Dr. M. C. Merrill, chief of publications of the Department of Agriculture and Mrs. Merrill, with their daughter, Miss Betty Merrill, have just returned to Washington after a vacation of six weeks in the West during which they visited Rushmore Mountain in the Black Hills where Gutzon Borglum is carving the faces of Presidents Lincoln, Jefferson and Washington. After touring through the Yellowstone, the Merrills attended a reunion of their family in Richmond, Utah. Dr. Merrill presented the history of his father which he has just completed writing.

In Los Angeles, they visited Mrs. Merrill's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Partridge, and her nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. R. Marion Clawson. The rest of their 9,000 mile trip included Lake Tahoe, Boulder Dam, the Grand Canyon, Zion Canyon and Bryce Canyon.

Mrs. George Courts Visits Macondrays

Naval Officer and Wife Now at Vaucleuse.

Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Atherton Macondray, who now are occupying the "big house" at Vaucleuse, Seminary Hill, Va., have as their guest Mrs. George McCall Courts, formerly of Washington and St. Louis. She recently has returned to the East after two years in California.

Vaucleuse, where the Macondrays have been making their home since the commander came to Washington for duty, long was the home of the late Mrs. Eliphalet Fraser Andrews. Mrs. Macondray, who grew up in Washington as Miss Helen Tucker, was Mrs. Eliphalet Fraser Andrews, jr., before her second marriage.

Catholic Women's President Arrives

Mrs. Williams to Preside at Conference.

Mrs. Katherine Williams, president of the National Council of Catholic Women, arrived in Washington yesterday to preside at the conference of the council which opened with board meetings at the Mayflower yesterday.

District of Columbia delegates include Miss Dorothy Abts, president of the Alumnae of the National Catholic School of Social Service; Mrs. Daniel Dunning, president of the Visitation Academy Alumnae; Miss Elsie Hopewell, president of the St. Joseph Auxiliary, No. 62, Knights of St. John; Miss Rose Moore, president of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Knights of St. John; Mrs. Florence E. Tucker, president of the Holy Comforter Ladies Auxiliary, Knights of St. John; Miss Augusta Uhle, of the Catholic Daughters of America.

Miss Fisher Wed To Clifford Menz

Singer Made Debut With Metropolitan in 1936.

Washingtonians who attended the Metropolitan Opera last December and recall Miss Suzanne Fisher, who made her debut then in the role of Cho-Cho-San in "Madame Butterfly," will be interested in the announcement of her wedding which took place September 18 in St. Paul, Minn., when she became the bride of Clifford Menz, jr. She is the daughter of Mrs. Sarah Fisher and the late John L. Fisher, of Sutton, W. Va. Mr. Menz is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Menz, of St. Paul.

The bridegroom is a tenor soloist at St. Bartholomew's Church in New York and has appeared in light operas a number of times.

Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Fierst Parents of Daughter

Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Fierst are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter on Tuesday, September 21, at Garfield Memorial Hospital.

The child has been named Loranne. Mrs. Fierst formerly was Miss Anne Loretta McHugh, daughter of Martin J. McHugh and the late Mrs. McHugh.

Attend National Catholic Conference Here

Underwood & Underwood.

Harry Ericksson Arrives to Begin Legation Duties

M. Harry Ericsson, who will replace Per Wijkman as Commercial Counselor of the Swedish Legation, has arrived in Washington and will take over his new duties within the next few days. He was formerly Swedish Consul in Dublin.

With their plans completed for leaving the Capital on Tuesday and sailing from New York on the Gripsholm Thursday, the Wijkmans have closed their house on Hoban road and moved to the Wardman Park, where they are spending a few days with Mme. Wijkman's brother and sister-in-law, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Wallace.

Miss Ella Harllee Resumes Study

Washington Girl Attended Wedding of Brother at Yuma, Ariz.

Miss Ella Fulmore Harllee, who returned to Washington September 18 after attending the wedding of her brother, Lieut. (j. g.) John Harllee, U. S. N., and Miss Jobeth Garden, September 10, at Yuma, Ariz., is now resuming her studies at American University, where she is a senior.

The bride, the former Miss Carden, is a resident of San Francisco, where she has lived with her aunt, Mrs. Anie C. Kinnebrew. Lieut. Harllee is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy and has been serving on the U. S. S. Phelps.

The marriage was planned to take place in San Francisco upon the arival of the U. S. S. Phelps there. However, the ship was assigned to special duty and a change in the wedding plans was made necessary. The couple were married in Yuma in order to avoid the four-day delay that would have taken place, according to California law.

To Celebrate Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmon V. Carr will celebrate their thirty-first wedding anniversary on Sunday by receiving friends at their home on Decatur street. Mrs. Carr, who formerly lived in Kansas City, is a cousin of Gen. Henry Leavenworth who founded Fort Leavenworth, Kans.,

Taking the Word of Gaynell Tinsley.

By Shirley Povich.

If a big six-footer weighing 196 pounds can appear wistful for any reason, then Gaynell Tinsley was just a bit wistful last evening at Griffith Stadium as he watched Sammy Baugh deal 'em off the arm to the Redskins ends in practice.

POVICH.

Gaynell Tinsley, in case you don't know, is, like Baugh, a prize exhibit of the National Professional Football League. He's an end and he's the property of the Chicago Cardinals, who have a 60-minute date with the Redskins tonight at Mr. Griffith's quick-change stadium.

Tinsley, as I was saying, was watching Baugh plant those spirals into the clutches of most anybody who ventured down field for the Redskins, and, no kidding, it was a wistful sign that Tinsley heaved. The big, light-haired fellow turned to Coach Milan Creighton, of the Cardinals, nodded his head in Baugh's direction and said, "How about that guy? Ain't he the champ?"

• • • •

"I could probably find a place for Baugh on this club," said Creighton with a smile, thereby shattering all freestyle records for understatement.

• • • •

Pass-catching, in case you don't know, is Tinsley's specialty and he was thinking about those passes Baugh threw him last month when they both were in the line-up of the College All-Stars against the National League champions at Chicago, particularly that pass he caught from Baugh for the only touchdown of the game.

"I'd like to be on the same club with that guy," Tinsley was saying. "He makes a fellow catch a pass. Lays it right up there where you can muff it. If it does get away from you it's not Baugh's fault. It's like picking daisies—catching the light ball he throws. It's fast, but light just the same.

• • • •

"We've got a couple of pretty good passers on our club—Doug Russell and George Grosvenor, but I'm not insulting either one of 'em when I say Baugh is way ahead of 'em. We'd have gone to town those years I was down at L. S. U. if we had Sammy chucking 'em to some of those guys who could catch 'em. We had some fair passers down there—I thought they were great until I worked with Sammy at Chicago."

• • • •

Tinsley is the prize package of the Cardinals, the lad they picked when they had first choice in the football draft and he shooed one of the Cardinals, the lad they picked when they had first choice in the football draft and he shooed one of the Cardinals' veteran ends out of a regular job in the first week of practice with the pros. Down at Louisiana State they swear by him as the best end the South ever produced and he has the clippings to show that he was No. One choice on the Associated Press' All-American teams of 1935 and 1936.

Tinsley was looking at Griffith Stadium last night for the second time in his life. The other occasion was a Saturday in October, 1934, when he was a rising young sophomore end with Louisiana State, which was battling George Washington University at the stadium in the game arranged personally by the late Huey Long, who wanted to show off his Louisiana boys before fans of the Nation's Capital.

• • • •

"I remember we won that game, 6 to 0," Tinsley was saying, "and we caught plenty hell from our coach because we came up here expecting a soft touch. He was telling us all along that George Washington was going to be tough, but we figured he was giving us the old hokum.

• • • •

"He kept telling us about what a great football player that Tuffy Leemans was, and how we'd have to watch him. Well, we saw right off that he was right about that. Leemans didn't have much help that day, but he sure did tear us up—the toughest guy to stop I ever did see. I think he'd really been something if he was on a team like ours with guys who could block for him.

"Anyway, whatever I remember best about that game was what happened when Sullivan caught a punt for our side and looked like he was going to run it back for a touchdown. If I never see another great tackle, it won't make much difference, because I saw the best that day. Leemans made it.

"Leemans had kicked that ball, don't forget, and the first thing he knew he had to make the tackle himself. Sullivan galloped straight down the sidelines and had two blockers in front of him, and the only guy he had to run by was this Leemans. Well, to us guys on the other end of the field he looked like a 100-to-1 shot to score—easy.

• • • •

But somehow that Leemans just laid back there and waited for those three guys, and when Sullivan got close, Tuffy faked a break and drew both of those blockers right out of the way. Then he spun around and nailed Sullivan from behind. Honest. You wouldn't think Sullivan could miss, but that Leemans got him. I ain't surprised he's a big shot now with the Giants."

Giants Crush Cubs, 8 to 7; Melton Star

Lanky Lefty Retires Final Two Men in 9th Inning.

By William Weeks,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—Lanky Cliff Melton came to the rescue today to save an 8-to-7, thrill-packed triumph for the Giants—a victory that crushed out everything but the Chicago Cubs' mathematical chances of overhauling the onrushing New Yorkers in the National League championship race.

The Cubs, battling with flaming fury in the final game of the vital series, fought the league leaders right down to the last out, forced Manager Bill Terry to call in every member of his starting pitching corps, only to fall a run short of a tie with two men left on base in the ninth.

Melton, hero of a six-hit 6-to-0 victory which squared the series for the Giants yesterday, was called in today with the bases loaded in the ninth and one man out. Billy Herman had started the final, desperate attempt to win a double off Harry Gumbert, third of the Giant hurlers. Dick Bartell tossed out Frank Demaree, but Gabby Hartnett walked and Ripper Collins beat out a single to First Baseman Johnny McCarthy.

Almost frantic in his efforts to make the most of the opportunity, Manager Charley Grimm sent Tuck Stainback in to run for Hartnett and Clay Bryant to do the same for Collins. Terry hailed in Melton, and Grimm sent a right-handed hitter, Carl Reynolds, in to bat for Phil Cavarretta. Reynolds drilled a long fly to Lou Chiozza and Herman scored, as 29,414 spectators sat breathlessly on the edges of their seats. Everything was over, however, when Melton forced Augie Galan to ground to Mel Ott for the final out.

Defeated Yanks Win Flag as Tigers Bow

Victors Not as Impressive as Last Season When They Had 19½-Game Margin at Finish; Lefty Gomez Outstanding.

(By the Associated Press)

New York, Sept. 23.—Although beaten 9 to 5 by the St. Louis Browns, the New York Yankees clinched the American League pennant today when the second-place Detroit Tigers were beaten by the Boston Red Sox.

Although not as impressive from a power standpoint as last year, when they wound up with a 19½-game lead, the Yankees overrode handicaps of injuries, illness and holdouts this season that had every member of their varsity staff, with the single exception of Iron-Man Lou Gehrig, out of action at one time or another.

A fine pitching comeback by Lefty Gomez, who was the big leagues' first 20-game winner of the season, and top-flight form by Red Ruffing, who started fast after missing the first month of the season through his holdout, made up for the other handicaps.

Ruffing, however, was unable to follow form today. Given a 5-1 lead through the first four innings, largely on a two-run homer by Tony Lazzeri in the second, and timely hitting in the fourth, Ruffing was unable to come through for his nineteenth victory. A home run by Harland Clift with two on in the sixth started him on the way out. The Brownies sent him to the showers with a two-run blast in the seventh and put the game on ice with three more off Johnny Murphy in the eighth.

They had a former Yankee, Ben Chapman, to thank for clinching the pennant today. Chapman, now performing for the Red Sox, blasted a three-run homer in the last of the ninth to beat the Tigers and put them finally and completely out of the race.

The Yankees were the class of the league from the start of the season to the finish. Never far out of the front, they took over first place on May 24 and held it to the finish. A classy money team, they were particularly impressive against their second-place challengers. Throughout the season, they lost only one series to a second-place outfit—that one to the Chicago White Sox in Chicago in late July. They immediately made up for it by sweeping the Sox in four straight in a return engagement the following week.

Their attack, just as last year, featured the home run throughout. Led by Joe DiMaggio, the big league leader with 44, and Gehrig, with 36, they overpowered any and all kinds of pitching. Over the season they hit 165 circuit clouts, and for a time threatened to outdo their major league record of 182 set last year.

Krakauskas Turns Back Indians, 3-2

Case Stars at Bat With 3 Hits; Hudlin Replaced by Bob Feller.

By Shirley Povich.

Blond Joe Krakauskas, the broad-beamed left-hander who is rapidly dissipating any notions that he is a flash in the pan, flashed his speed in the pans of the Cleveland Indians yesterday and the Nats won a ball game—by Krakky.

Krakauskas was the leader yesterday of the Nats' late-season youth movement, and while he was holding the Indians to eight hits and tainted runs, two other youths—George Case and Jimmy Bloodworth—produced the necessary three runs for Washington.

The final score was 3 to 2, but it was shut-out ball that Krakauskas pitched, in fact. Four of those hits that he surrendered to the Indians

Garcia's Battle With Welter King Big Thrill of Ring Show

By Jack Paulus,
Sports Editor of The Post.

Polo Grounds, New York, Sept. 23.—Little Barnet David Rasofsky, the Chicago dynamo known as Barney Ross, became the champion of champions tonight when he successfully and dramatically defended his title against Ceferino Garcia, a one-man Philippino Revolution if ever there was one.

Barney and Garcia stole the show from under the noses of a galaxy of world's champions and their challengers, gathered before some 45,000 persons here in Mike Jacobs' fistic extravaganza, the carnival of champions.

The welterweight king was a real ring monarch tonight, and on a card of mediocre, slow battles he stuck out like a skyscaper on a prairie. He was class and style personified, he was the old "smoothie" who boxed, and danced and jabbed for two minutes of each round, then drove furiously into his opponent, rocking him with roundhouse rights and left.

Barney defended his throne tonight in the true heritage of the ring greats who held the title before him—McLarnin, the terrific puncher; Mickey Walker, the minature Dempsey; Jack Britton, of the terrific pace; Ted Kid Lewis; Joe Walcott, the great Negro; Rube Ferns, who knocked out Frank Erne; Tommy Ryan and Mysterious Billy Smith.

Ross fought gamely, came back repeatedly from a corner of hot hell poured by the little Filipino, and managed to win round after round by a grand fighting heart, fists that demanded authority every

Feature Won By Thorson; Pays $3.10

Bow and Arrow Beaten in Exciting Duel Down Stretch.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 23.—Candidates for the $10,000 added Havre de Grace Handicap, next Wednesday's feature here, contested in the Penn Athletic Club Handicap today and a dog-eat-dog stretch struggle resulted. Thorson, the favorite and carrying the black and white colors of B. M. Beyers, survived to win by a head from Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Chanceview. Giant Killer came from last in the group of five to be third.

Thorson's ability at the distance and at the weight was not a secret and he was backed into favoritism with so much enthusiasm that extra tickets were sold. After his number had been displayed in the winning slot his backers collected $3.10 for each $2 investment.

Jockey Basil James hustled Thorson into the lead as Starter Milton gave them the bell for the mile and a sixteenth struggle. Bow and Arrow and Master Lad accompanied the favorite to the first turn and the latter was bothered somewhat swinging for the back stretch and dropped out of it.

Wage Keen Battle.

Thorson and Bow and Arrow waged a keen battle along the backstretch, but Chanceview, still racing wide, was close. On the swing for the stretch Chanceview came around menacingly and Bow and Arrow stopped. Thorson and his Vanderbilt rival then engaged in their contest that thrilled the crowd.

A pair of well-played horses teamed to produce a $41.60 mutuel in the popular daily double. The winning combination was that of "4 and 1" and involved Sea Gull, winner of the first race, and Greenski, winner of the second. Sea Gull, one that ran a good sprint earlier in the week, came from off the pace to defeat 11 Marylandbreds at a mile and a sixteenth. Greenski, despite a poor getaway, gained the lead early in his sprint and held sway throughout to bring the favorite players a $5.90 mutuel.

Bull Whip, with Joe Wagner aboard, won the third race, defeating Tedium and Salorium of the Vanderbilt entry after a dash of 6 furlongs. Diavolo Boy set the early pace but dropped out of it when Bull Whip forged into command. Tedium came at a fast clip through the stretch but he was downed by half a length. Bull Whip, carrying the colors of the Brandywine Stable, paid $8.30.

A thrilling stretch battle marked the finish of the fourth race with Time Signal earning the decision by a head from Gin Daisy after the two had teamed at the head of the stretch. Perlette, a long shot, was a fast-moving third in the group of 12. Time Signal, ridden by Apprentice Jockey R. Eccard, paid $8.70.

Jockey Claims Foul.

Jolyon at a $9.70 mutuel, won the seventh race, drawing away from Uncle Lester in the stretch. Prettylass was third. Apprentice Jockey R. Eccard, who rode Uncle Lester, made a futile claim of foul. The sixth race brought a dead heat for second money between Hit and Run and Ivory Tip. Rip Van Winkle, a $4.60 favorite, carried off first honors.

Redskins Favorites to Defeat Cardinals; Battles Returns to Line-up

Local Pros In Second League Tilt

Presence of Baughand Battles Gives Flaherty Added Power.

Washington will toss its two B-men—Baugh and Battles—at the Chicago Cardinals tonight, alternately and simultaneously, and on that promise the Redskins have been installed a 7-5 favorite to win the game at Griffith Stadium.

With a promise of fairweather, Battles' debut in the Redskins' backfield will be made before an expected crowd of 20,000. Advance ticket sales yesterday rivaled the total pregame sale for the Redskins-Giants game which attracted 25,000 to the park last week.

Coach Ray Flaherty was undecided last night whether to start Battles or Baugh in the Redskins' backfield, leaning a bit toward Baugh, but he indicated emphatically that both of his ace backs would be playing side by side at some point during the battle.

The Redskins' attack which last week was featured by Baugh's passes tonight looms as a more varied offensive with Battles, the league's outstanding climax runner, available to carry the ball. An infected foot kept the big blond Battles out of the Giants' game.

Both the Redskins and the Cardinals took their final practice under the lights at Griffith Stadium last night, the Chicago club following the Washington athletes off the field. The weight advantage of the Redskins was apparent to hundreds of onlookers.

The center of attention, aside from Baugh, was, very naturally, big Gaynell Tinsley, Cardinal end, who joined the pros this season after two years of All-Americanism at Louisiana State. Tinsley, hailed as the greatest end in professional ranks despite his meager pro experience was the lad who caught the touchdown pass thrown by Baugh for the College All-Stars against the champion Green Bay Packers at Soldiers Field last month.

The Cardinals, hailed as the league's dark horse, justified that label when they defeated the Green Bay Packers in their 1937 debut and were not disgraced when they lost a 16-7 game to the Detroit Lions. In the fourth quarter of that battle, the Cardinals twice marched 50 yards down the field only to lose the ball.

Coach Milan Creighton, who is in his fourth year at the helm of the Chicago squad, will present in George Grosvener and Doug Russell a veteran pair of backs who will receive the special attention of the Redskins. Both Grosvener and Douglas will be aiming at Tinsley with their passes.

It will be a complete set of veteran Pro League backs that Creighton will start tonight. At quarter back, Howard Tipton is rated the fastest man in the league. After breaking in with the Cardinals as an end and a guard, Tipton returned to the backfield, a role in which he starred for Southern California's national champions of 1932. He will do the blocking for Russell and Grosvener.

The line-cracking duties of the Cardinals will devolve chiefly on Hal Pangle, now in his third season with the Cardinals. Pangle is a compact 200-pounder only 5 feet 10 inches tall, who starred at Oregon State.

Despite the superior reputations of Battles and Baugh, Don Irwin is counted equally as valuable a man in the Redskins' backfield and is regarded by Coach Flaherty as the work-horse of the team. Irwin's gallops against the Giants last week stamped him as a favorite with Washington fans.

Tony Manero Wins Medal At Belmont

Belmont, Mass., Sept. 23 (AP).—Tony Manero, of Salem, the 1936 Open champion and Ryder Cupper, today holed a long sidehill putt for a two under 69 that clinched the 36-hole medal prize in the $12,000 Belmont Open match play golf tournament with a 140 total.

A wild tee shot and two weak putts prevented Byron Nelson, of Reading, Pa., Manero's international teammate, from gaining that honor and the $250 special cash award. Nelson, out in 33, three under, sixed the seventeenth to wind up with a par-71 that placed him in a second-place tie at 141 with Al Brosch, the 25-year-old public links professional from Farmingdale, N. Y.

Manero, out in 35, one under, snagged two birdies on the last three holes to top the star-studded field. The best golf played during the second round, however, was Leo Diegel's three-under 68, the result of an amazing 32-inward nine, which broke the competitive record for those holes.

Sam Snead finished in fourth place with 70, 72—142 and a stroke behind him came Charlie Yansick, of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., and E. J. Harrison, of Little Rock, Ark.

The 144 group included Diegel, Al Watrous, Vic Ghezzi and Johnny Revolta and four more were bunched a stroke behind that famous quartet, Frank Walsh, of Chicago; Horton Smith, Harry Cooper and Ben Hogan, of Fort Worth, Tex.

Among those failing to qualify for the match play were Ed Dudley, Jimmy Hines and Tom Creavy, who won the P. G. A. title the last time he competed in this section.

Wiffy Cox, Kenwood, was safely in the match play rounds by adding a 74 to yesterday's 76 for a 150 total.

Versis Wins.

The Versis Food Pewees blanked Takoma Park A. C., 11 to 0, yesterday on the latter's diamond as Stathis allowed only 2 hits and struck out 12.

Argentine Polo Team Is Upset In Cup Tourney

San Jose Four Beaten by Aknusti Team in Waterbury Cup Play.

By the Associated Press.

Westbury, N. Y., Sept. 23.—The big surprise of the Waterbury Cup tournament was urnished by the Aknusti team this afternoon when it shaded the San Jose team of Argentina, 8 to 7. With the two Gerry brothers, Elbridge and Robert, R. E. Strawbridge and William Post, Aknusti, with a 1-goal handicap allowance kept the Argentines in a constant state of disorganization.

The crowd was dumbfounded when it saw the highly touted San Jose riders outplayed and their horses outspeeded. It was a nip and tuck battle with an abundance of fouling and deplorable missing by both teams. The score was tied five times, and not once during the afternoon did San Jose show the team-play displayed in the open against Greentree. Billy Post, the Aknusti back, played a fine game in defense of his goal and he and Strawbridge broke up the Argentine combination play repeatedly.

The lineups:

Aknusti.	Position.	San Jose.
E.T.Gerry	No. 1	L.Duggan
R.L.Gerry	No. 2	H.Duggan
Strawbridge	No. 3	Gazzotti
Post	Back	Andrada

Aknusti ..... 2 0 0 0 1 1 1 3—8

Legion Crowd At Amateurs

Parker Takes Decision as 3,000 Watch.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 23.—Under a clear sky and brightly-shining stars, some 30,000 Legionnaires, their wives and their friends turned out at the Madison Square Garden bowl tonight for a program of sixteen amateur boxing bouts staged under the auspices of the Metropolitan Association of the A. A. U. for the benefit of the American Legion.

Sending into action State, sectional and national champions, these bouts were the best-attended in the history of the A. A. U.

After Myrtle Leonard, Metropolitan opera contralto, had sung "The Star Spangled Banner" to get the program under way, a 135-pound local boy, Howard Calvert, of the Teasdale A. C., won the opening three-rounder, a free-swinging affair, on a decision over Stanley Walsh, Haverstraw, N. Y., youngster who had an advantage in height and reach but little else.

Don Padgett Bats Cards To 8-4 Win

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Sept. 23.—Paced by Don Padgett, who hammered a homer and two triplets, the Cardinals came from behind to wallop the Brooklyn Dodgers, 8 to 4, today.

Anita Lizana Is Upset by Mrs. Van Ryn

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Sept. 23.—Two smashing upsets, with Senorita Anita Lizana, of Chile, and Helen Jacobs, of California, the victims, provided the fireworks for today's play in the Pacific Southwest tennis championships.

Senorita Lizana, newly crowned United States singles champion, went out in the quarter-finals of women's singles before the crafty play of Mrs. John (Midge) Van Ryn, of Austin, Tex., 5—7, 6—3, 6—1.

Victorious in today's semifinal matches in the men's singles, America's J. Donald Budge and Baron Gottfried von Cramm, of Germany, will renew their feud in the championship finals Saturday.

Von Cramm, the world's No. 2 singles player, was hard pressed to defeat 18-year-old Joe Hunt, of Los Angeles, national junior singles champion, who carried the German star to five sets before losing, 6—4, 4—6, 6—1, 3—6, 6—2. Von Cramm's stamina and all-around polished play finally brought him the match.

Budge had an easy time disposing of his doubles partner, Gene Mako, 8—6, 6—2, 6—0. It was hardly a workout for the California redhead.

In the women's singles upper bracket Alice Marble, of San Francisco, 1936 national singles titlist, eliminated Bonnie Blank, Los Angeles, 6—0, 6—3, and will meet Dorothy Bundy, who won today over Helen Germaine, of New York, 6—1, 10—8.

Central High Eleven Entrains Today for N. J. Night Game

By Jack Munhall.

A little less confident but much wiser after the opening game defeat at the hands of Gonzaga, the Central High School eleven entrains this morning at 11 o'clock for Patterson, N. J., where the city champion Eastside High eleven will be met tonight at 8:15 p. m., under the lights in the Hinchliffe Stadium.

The contest, first intersectional one for any local eleven this season, has been ballyhooed to great extent in the small industrial town and Mayor John V. Hinchliffe, United States Senator A. Harry Moore and Representative of the House, George N. Seger, both of New Jersey, will be among the notables attending. Other well-known sports figures will be there including Fordham's famed football coach, Sleepy Jim Crowley.

Twenty-five Central gridders under the supervision of Coach Hardy Pearce will make the trip, the first of two forages to New Jersey. The Mount Pleasanters are scheduled to meet Thomas Jefferson High, of Elizabeth, in the final game of the season on November 25.

Pearce's men are in prime shape with only one player bearing more than slight injuries as a result of the gruelling battle with Gonzaga. Although several are nursing bruises, Hugh Cramer, 200-pound All-High tackle, is the only serious casualty. Cramer has a bad knee which may prevent him from action tonight.

Yesterday Pearce made it known that he intends to use his second 11 against Eastside as often as possible and present plans call for it to start and continue until shown to be outclassed. Satisfied with the performance of his first team against Gonzaga Tuesday, Pearce plans no changes in the regular line-up. The defensive improvement of Sam Fox and the all-around play of Charley Jones and Cramer were a salve for the stinging loss to Mitchell's purple passers.

The trip will be a short one. For the squad will immediately after the Eastside engagement for Newark to spend the night. The Central boys will arrive home early Saturday morning and Pearce will hop right over to Alexandria to scout Eastern in its game with George Washington High. Eastern invades Central in the Inter-high series opener Friday, October 1.

The Central-Washington & Lee game originally scheduled for Thursday of next week has been moved up to Friday to allow the student cadets who drill on Thursday to see the skirmish.

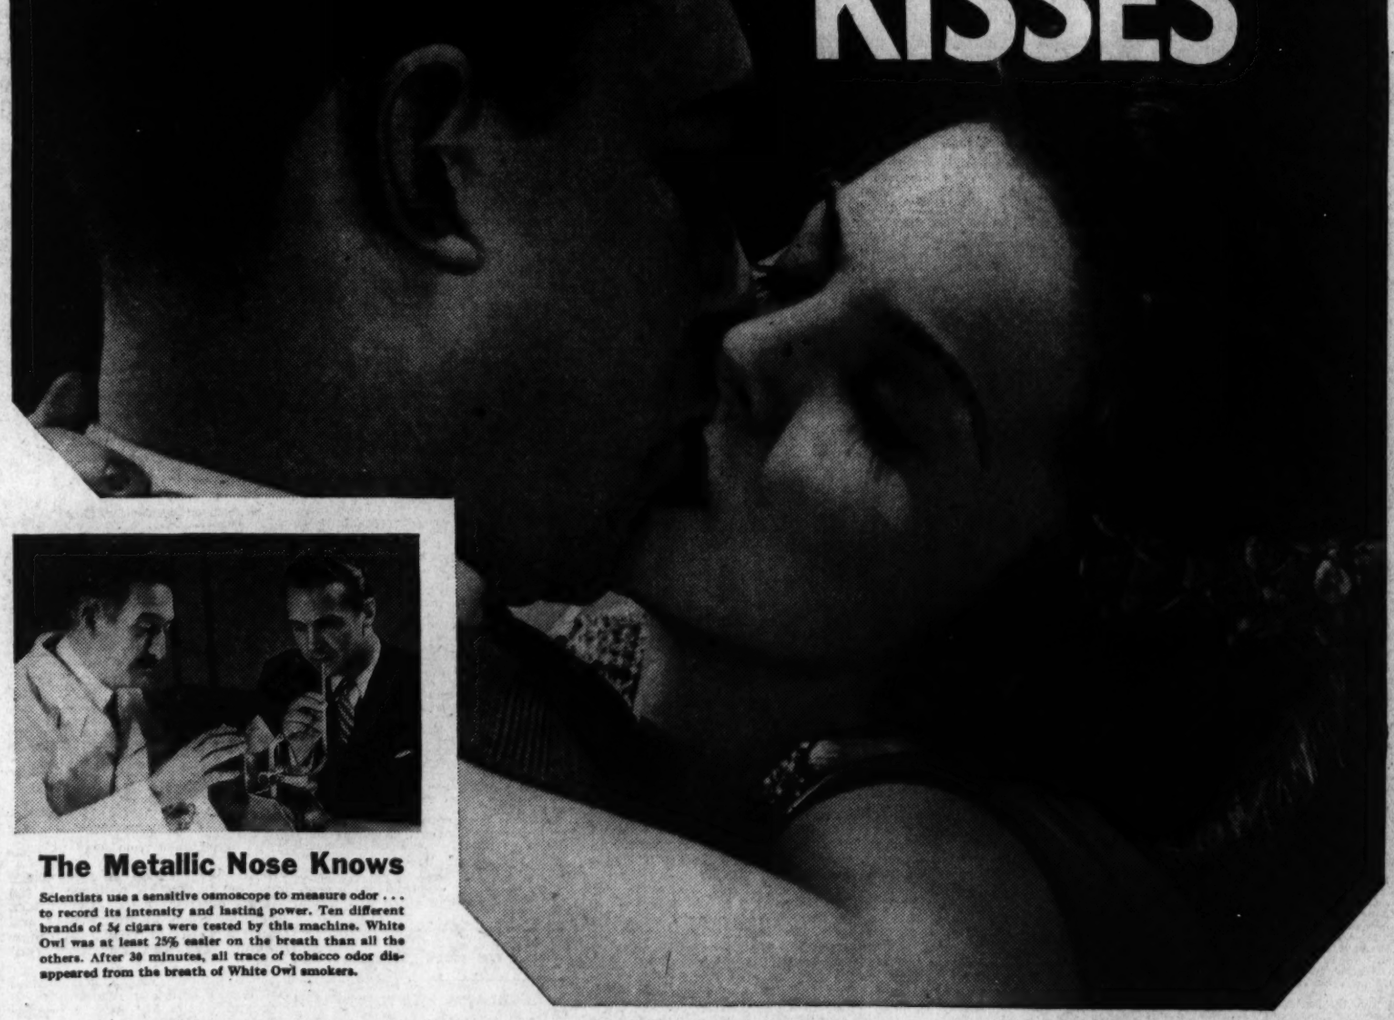
Cigars Needn't Interfere with KISSES



The Metallic Nose Knows

Scientists use a sensitive osmoscope to measure odor . . . to record its intensity and lasting power. Ten different brands of 5¢ cigars were tested by this machine. White Owl was at least 25% easier on the breath than all the others. After 30 minutes, all trace of tobacco odor disappeared from the breath of White Owl smokers.

Smokers' test shows that White Owls are at least 25% easier on your breath

YOU don't have to give up cigars—or kisses either. Choose the cigar that is easier on your breath! Then enjoy both.

New scientific discoveries have shown that White Owl's Vintage tobacco is exceptionally low in the substances that cause unpleasant tobacco breath. Tests with a delicate osmoscope prove that this tobacco leaves less odor.

White Owl is a better cigar because it always has a Vintage-tobacco filler. Nature—not artificial factory processing—made this tobacco exceptionally mild, mellow.

We maintain a vast crop-inspection system—the only known organization of its kind—to locate Vintage tobacco. Even in Vintage years, we classify all filler tobacco into seven grades—and use only tobacco of the quality of the top three for White Owls.

Look for a White Owl the next time you feel like smoking. Light it up and let your taste tell you that it's better than ever. This will please the ladies, too.

Mrs. Meckley, Miss Brown Meet Today

Mrs. Imick Vs. Mrs. Tucker in Other Post Cup Semifinal.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

In the feature encounter that would vie for top billing with any match played in the District this year, Mrs. Betty Meckley, medalist and favorite will meet the challenge of Marion Brown. Al Treder's protege from the Manor club, in the fifth annual Washington Post tourney semi-finals at Columbia today.

Yesterday's play was paced by the victory of last year's finalist, Mrs. A. W. Tucker, of Beaver Dam, who surprised, not only by the victory, but by the decisive 6 and 5 margin she turned in over Mrs. Charlotte Stern, of Indian Spring. Her opponent today, Mrs. Earl Amick, a host club hope, won by a comfortable 4 and 3 margin over Mrs. F. D. Letts, of Chevy Chase.

Mrs. Meckley used a last nine spurt to win, 4 and 3, over Mrs. Arnold McNitt, of Congressional, while Marion Brown closed out Mrs. J. H. Bullock, of Indian Spring, by a 2 and 1 margin.

Mrs. Tucker, who plays to her 13 handicap with rock-steady consistency, will give a single stroke to Mrs. Amick today, on the fifth hole, while Mrs. Meckley, sporting a one handicap, will give Miss Brown strokes on the fifth, sixth and twelfth.

Mrs. Meckley Down.

Mrs. Arnold McNitt took an early lead against Mrs. Meckley in the quarterfinals and at the end of eight holes was in the van by two holes and an upset seemed in the making. Here the Indian Spring entrant, winner of every important tournament in this sector, rallied to win the ninth hole with a four to reduce the margin to one, and took four of the five holes on the back nine to win on the fifteenth hole.

Mrs. Tucker played the finest round of golf she has ever scored on Columbia's course in eliminating Mrs. Stern. The latter jumped a perfect stymie on the first hole for a half in five, plunking the ball into the cup with a niblic. Mrs. Tucker won the second, however, to hold a one-up margin, and it was increased to four at the ninth hole.

Using every one of the seven strokes to either win or halve, Mrs. Tucker took advantage of three in a row on the tenth and twelfth to gain two wins and a half, and close the match on the twelfth green.

Mrs. Amick also used a two-stroke handicap to advantage and was benefited by two perfect stymies on the first and seventh holes that Mrs. Letts could not negotiate. The evenual winner was four up at the eighth hole, three up at the turn and ended the match on the fifteenth hole.

Nip and Tuck.

Miss Brown and Mrs. Bullock were nip and tuck throughout their 17-hole encounter. The Manor Club member was 2-up at the half-way point, lost the tenth, but scored one of the few fours of the event on the eleventh hole to again boost the lead to 2-up.

The next two were halved, but Miss Brown lost the fourteenth hole, where she gave a stroke. On the fifteenth she drove her second shot into the spring, and the ball was retrieved by her caddie with a dipper. Mrs. Bullock, trapped from the tee, lost the hole, won the next, but drove into the water on 17, and Marion won with a par 4.

The match today between two of the city's leading golfers will be the second meeting within the past month, Mrs. Meckley defeating her younger opponent on the last green in the White Sulphur Spring's Invitation.

In the consolation flight, Mrs. Purdy, Beaver Dam, meets Mrs. Pray, of Manor, while Mrs. Walper faces Mrs. Stokes. The finals will be played tomorrow.

Odds Unchanged.

The scalings did little to change the odds on the four 15-round championships. Montanez remained the favorite over Champion Ambers at 6 to 5 in the biggest betting bout on the entire card. Marcel Thil, the only decidedly underdog among the champions, continued to have bets placed at 3½ to 1 against him. Ross remained a 3 to 1 favorite over Garcia and the odds against Jeffra were trimmed to 8 to 5 in a late surge of betting.

Championship Flight.

Mrs. A. W. Tucker, Beaver Dam, 13, defeated Mrs. Charlotte Stern, Indian Spring, 5, 6 and 5.

Mrs. Earl Amick, Columbia, 14, defeated Mrs. F. D. Letts, Chevy Chase, 12, 4 and 3.

Miss Marion Brown, Manor, 4, defeated Mrs. J. H. Bullock, Indian Spring, 14, 2 and 1.

Consolation.

Mrs. C. E. Purdy, Beaver Dam, 10, defeated Mrs. H. A. Knox, Congressional, 11, 4 and 3.

Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor, 6, defeated Mrs. Florence Godfrey, Beaver Dam, 12, 3 and 1.

Mrs. Walter Stokes, Indian Spring, 5, defeated Mrs. Merrill Lord, Columbia, 18, 3 and 1.

Mrs. Leo Walper, Kenwood, 6, defeated Mrs. Jack Scott, Kenwood, 4, 2 and 1.

Pairings.

9:30, Mrs. Tucker vs. Mrs. Amick; 9:35, Mrs. Meckley vs. Miss Brown. Consolations—9:15, Mrs. Purdy vs. Mrs. Pray; 9:20, Mrs. Stokes vs. Mrs. Walper.

minute of the fight and a ring wisdom that astonished even the oldest of the veteran ring followers at the ringside.

In a card woefully lacking in thrills or knockdowns, two other champions lost their crowns, while the lightweight title went back to Herkimer, N. J., with Lou Ambers. In the slowest fight of the night, Ambers pounded out a luke-warm decision over Pedro Montanez, of Puerto Rico, who looked anything but like the highly touted killer he was said to be.

Harry Jeffra, Baltimore bantamweight, surprised the 32,600 fans who braved a chilly night to watch the proceedings, by defeating Sixto Escobar, of Puerto Rico, for the 118-pound title. The affair was a slam-bang festival of fists which aptly wound up the evening's card.

A crowd which fell far below Promoter Mike Jacobs' estimated 50,000 paid $232,644.25 and was sorely disappointed in this card of champions which produced, with the exception of the Ross-Garcia massacre, little in the way of excitement.

Ross Beats Garcia To Keep Crown.

It was Ross-Garcia fight that provided what little fireworks the Carnival possessed tonight, however. The little Chicago Jewish boy, just slightly ring rusty from a long layoff, had the measure of his opponent throughout the battle. Garcia looked like a milk-wagon nag daring to race a thoroughbred. Barney had the class, the style, the punch but to his foe's never-ending credit, the Filipino somehow always managed to come back.

Garcia undoubtedly gave Barney the greatest battle of his career, a fight that easily surpassed in sheer ferocity and savage violence all the Ross-McLarnin battles, and they were no knitting parties. The Filipino was not the boy to be knocked out, he was not even the boy to be knocked down. He returned Barney's punch with a punch, and his threat with a threat—but, in the last analysis, it was Barney's class that told the story.

Both Ross and Garcia started out like proverbial houses afire. Barney lashed out with both hands only to find the Filipino more than willing to play his kind of a game. Each had an obvious plan, a plan that was revealed after the first round of fighting. Barney was out to fight his usual two minute—one minute fight. Garcia's plan was a different one—but with the same mayhem in mind. The challenger was out for a kill. Someone had told him that Barney was rusty, that he was old, that he would fold up in three or four rounds. The surprise on the kid's face when Barney bobbed up, fresher than ever, for the tenth would make a picture for Da Vinci.

But the battle plans, as they materialized, were just what this crowd wanted. They came for action, and, with the exception of this grand fight, they had got little of it. Had the Ross-Garcia fight been even half as good it would easily have topped tonight's top-heavy card.

Garcia suffered a cut under his eye in the fourth—the first real casualty of the battle. Blood streamed down his face, and Barney kept stabbing toward that eye. For the only time in the fight Garcia seemed to tire. He looked weary as he hung onto Barney's shoulder as the round ended. He was a wounded, bleeding, tired lad when he turned to his corner. Barney danced about like a Pavlowa.

When the lads came up for the fifth, Barney was still the master with every step, with every blow. He was the perfect little general who sent out a scouting party left, reconnoitering right—then blasted forth with full artillery as each round wound up.

Ross was caught unawares in the sixth, however, and, for the only time in the fight, found himself in real trouble. Garcia let loose with a wild flurry of punches, bottling Barney in a corner and beating him about the head mercilessly. Barney came out of the corner with a puffed, bleeding nose. He grins and gives a grand imitation of W. C. Fields in his best moments. But the champion comes back and he all but murders the game challenger with a devastating series of right-hand punches.

The seventh and eighth proved hard rounds for the Filipino to take. His bushy mane, punched-in nose and large ears give him a natural leonine appearance, even out of the ring. With his mouth, nose and eye badly cut and blood streaming down his face, Garcia looked like a menacing, wounded lion.

The eighth, ninth and tenth rounds were repetitions of the seventh. No sooner would Garcia's handlers close up his cuts when Barney would pry them open with well-placed lefts and rights. The boys had this big crowd on its feet repeatedly with their savage flurries—flurries which left each fighter dripping blood. As each round ended, the champion would pat his foe on the back, grin through a gore-spattered mouth and return to his corner with the salvos of thunderous applause in his ears.

Ross fairly coasted through the final five rounds of the fight, periodically reopening his foe's cut, steadily pouring a hot lava of punches into the gaping craters over Ceferino's eye and otherwise making life miserable for his game antagonist. The champion all but petrified Garcia with his cunning. He could have saved half those powerhouse rights. Garcia was unable to figure out this "old man" who fought like a youngster and whose rapier punches seared the swollen skin over his eyes, tortured the fevered membrane around his mouth and bobbed like a wild will-o-the-wisp before his half-closed, blood-shot eyes.

It was Barney's fight and he won it like a champion. He took every devastating blow the Filipino could offer, he crumbled under those in the corner attacks, but always came back to wind up the round in a rain of cross-fire. But as the fight neared its climax Barney tried to knock his man out, he tried to humble this brave boy to his feet—but Garcia was to proud to humble and too tough to knock out. Whatever glory there was in winning for Ross it was the glory of victory over the toughest, gamest lad in his division.

Jeffra Upsets Escobar To Gain Title.

Probably of great interest to Washington fans is the victory of spunky Harry Jeffra, Baltimore bantamweight, over Sixto Escobar for the world's 118-pound title.

Jeffra was the paragon of perfection tonight. The lad could do nothing wrong. He spun the vaunted Escobar around like a top in a hurricane. He jumped backward across the ring, bounced off the ropes like an arrow and shot straight at Sixto's uncovered jaw. Just why Escobar refused to encase that particular part of his anatomy in a cradle of shoulders and elbows shall remain forever a mystery to the ringsiders, who were amazed at what was taking place in midring.

It was the Baltimore lad's terrific right, more than any other single factor, that won him the championship tonight. He used it with lightning rapidity, sending it spinning into his foe's face uncounted times in every minute. The baffled Sixto didn't know just what to make of this. This fellow who had beaten him twice before was doing it again. It was all very puzzling and Sixto shouldn't have puzzled. He should have kept an all-weather eye on Harry's right.

The fight was a slam-bang affair, despite the fact that there were no knockdowns. Coming after the soporific Ambers-Montanez piece. It put the customers back in the spirit of things and wound up an evening that otherwise would have been a serious flop.

Jeffra paced his fight well. He started off slowly, watching his foe for any tricks that he may have learned since their last meeting. When Harry discovered that it was the same old Sixto—the effect was an approach to mayhem. But valiant is the word for Escobar, as the little Puerto Rican weathered round after round of body punching, round after round of steady, consistent murder.

Jeffra opened the champion's eye in the eighth, and nothing that Trainer Ray Arcel could do about it would remedy the situation. No sooner did Arcel close it when Jaffra promptly opened it again. The champion was repeatedly warned of hitting low, and at one juncture Jeffra's manager almost lost the fight for his boy by partly climbing into the ring to protest.

Jeffra crossed himself thrice before the start of each round, then proceeded summarily to wear down his opponent. The crowd roared its approval of the decision as Baltimore became the home of a new champion.

Apostoli Stops Thil In 10th Round.

Marcel Thil was a blood-spattered European idol when Referee Arthur Donovan stopped the fight with Freddie Apostoli, the Pacific Coast contender, after 44 seconds of the tenth round.

Thil, the Bald Eagle of the Seine, was a game old man a tottering champion whi pushed Donvan away when the veteran official stepped between the two fighters to stop the fight. He had won only four rounds of the nine on The Post's score sheet and was in a bad way when Dr. Walker, the commission physician, examined his cut right eye between rounds.

The Frenchman fought as game a battle as his 35 years permitted, but was found wanting when the going began to get tough in the seventh, eighth and ninth rounds. Until then, the fight was a merry-go-round with both boys having a lot of fun and the customers holding the brass check. Neither cared to start anything in the early rounds, the American youngster being even more cautious than his aged opponent.

Ambers Gains Verdict Over Montanez.

What was to have been, in the books of the fight experts, the best battle of the evening, turned out to be the biggest fizzle. Apparently weakened by a desperate effort to make the weight and unwilling to trade punches with the lad, for some unknown reason the "Herkimer Hurricane," Pedro Montanez parked his jaw behind a bronzed shoulder, kept it there all evening and refused to come out and fight.

The fight was booed every round starting with the fourth and was given New York's very ultra-ultra in the way of a Bronx cheer when the boring business was over. Both lads locked each other in a beautiful, touching embrace, probably sang lullabies to each other and went through a classic interpretation of "the clinch waltz." It was all very touching and very tragic.

The fight actually, honestly started fast. What caused the thing to bog down in the middle of the first round and stayed bogged is something which archeologists of the future will wonder about modern man. It was just one of those things.

The damage inflicted by each on the other could hardly be cause even for civil action in a butterfly court. The boys flitted about the ring in a pagan song and dance, refused to mix it up despite the urging of the referee, the assembled sports scribes, and 32,000 cash customers. The only thing brutal about it was the $65,000 Ambers got for his share and the $40,000 Montanez was awarded. He'll probably tell his Puerto Rico fellows that U. S. is the land of opportunity. It was for him. No such money was ever before made with such little actual effort.

From the opening until the closing rounds it was clinch, dance—clinch—clinch, dance, clinch. It got so that the sports scribes became interested solely in the food cartons Mike Jacobs had passed around the ringside.

Still, it was not actually Ambers' fault. The lad really did want to fight. But he was tied up so completely, so perfectly by this Puerto Rican that the result was a grand imitation of a dance in a museum statuary hall.

A new maneuver was discovered by the lads, however, and it should go a long way to killing the fight business. Montanez would lock Ambers' right arm with his left and then the boys would paw at each other feebly. It looked like a contortionist swatting flies.

The few openings that were available went to waste, Mr. Ambers not being in the mood for this kind of business tonight. He could have straightened his foe out several times during the latter rounds, but somehow passed up the chance.

Why they didn't hold this dance in a ballet theater and charge ballet prices is a mystery. The less said about Mr. Ambers and Mr. Montanez, the better.

Swim Meet Set Tonight AtShoreham

By Jack Munhall.

With a record number of entries virtually assured, the swiming and diving meet annually presented under the auspices of the President's Cup Regatta Association will be held tonight, starting at 7:30 o'clock in the Venetian pool of the Shoreham Hotel.

Keeping pace with the boating events which have broken all previous records, the acquatic show is expected to set a District record, as more than 100 are expected to enter the events which have been divided into three classes. There will be events for women, men and boys, open to all amateur athletes registered with the Amateur Athletic Association.

Although the meet will draw some of the outstanding swimmers in the country, including Dorothy Forbes, national champion and holder of five world records in the back stroke, Washington will have several representatives capable of holding their own.

Margaret Hoffman, former Olympic swimmer, holder of the District mark for breaststroke and unbeaten in local competition, headlines the local stars.

Also counted on in the swimming events are June Booth and Ann Bono, who head a formidable Shoreham team; Ernie Boggs, of the D. C. Y. M. C. A., the local 100-yard free style champion. In the fancy diving local rooters will look to Bill Tablett, out-door low board champion, and Johnny Marshall, the best indoor low board performer in the city. The competition in the diving event will be keen, for Broadwood is sending Sam Hyman and Lou Neff while Penn A. C. dispatches two more outstanding springboard aces in Clayton Fisher and George Mullen, jr.

Besides Miss Forbes, Broadwood will send a group of Middle Atlantic champions which includes Otts Schaffhauser, 100-year freestyle Charles Ives 200 and 220-yard freestyle in which he also holds the Middle Atlantic mark, Ethel Kessler, breats stroke record holder and Dorothy Lubin, freestyle and back stroke.

One of the most interesting races for the spectators will be the 300-yard medley relay for men. Teams are limited to three men who swim 100 yards each in the breast stroke, back stroke and free style. This event puts into competition for the second year a handsome trophy won last year by the Penn A. C., which is here again in an attempt to capture a second leg on the coveted prize. Teams from Broadwood, its arch rival, York Athletic Club of York; Pennsylvania and other strong combinations will furnish Penn a stiff race.

Uncle Mike Thinks Of Hungry Scribes

By a Staff Correspondent.

New York, Sept. 23.—Uncle Mike Jacobs, who thinks of everything, introduced a new note into tonight's proceedings when he had his aides pass white boxes throughout the press rows.

The puzzled scribes curiously opened the cartons and found that Uncle Mike had provided them with chicken and combination sandwiches, a slice of cake and fruit.

"What, no beer?" said one writer.

Turner Beats Pirates, 2-1; 19th Victory

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 23.—Jim Turner chalked up his nineteenth victory of the season as the Boston Bees capitalized on loose base running by the Pirates today and eked out a 2-to-1 victory.

Three innings later the Pirates got their only run on four hits, but bobbled a good chance to tie or win when Arky Vaughan and Gus Suhr were both run down between third and home.

Tony Cuccinello's double in the sixth, followed by Rabbit Warstler's single, sewed up the game for the Swarm. A single and a double also accounted for their first run in the fourth.

Homers Help Browns Beat Yanks, 9 to 5

New York, Sept. 23.—The Yankees, needing a victory or a defeat for the second-place Detroit Tigers to clinch the American League pennant, were unable to hold a 4-run lead today and lost a 9-to-5 decision to the St. Louis Browns. Homers by Harland Clift and Rollie Hemsley accounted for 3 of the Brownies' runs. Tony Lazzeri hit one for the Yanks.

Chisox Nip Macks, 1-0; Win Series

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Sept. 23.—The White Sox, making it two out of three over the Athletics, bowed out of Shibe Park for the season by capturing the final encounter today, 1 to 0.

Johnny Whitehead bested Buck Ross in a hurling duel, keeping the Athletics' seven hits well balanced. Ross yielded six hits, and Smith, who relieved him in the ninth, was untouched.

Delivery News Eases Dealing On Corn Mart

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 23. — Subsiding of excitement over September corn dealings accompanied fractional net downturns of prices today, together with a material reduction of the amount of uncompleted contracts.

Just how much corn will be tendered between now and the end of the month remained a question, but immediate market tension was somewhat allayed by estimates that 700,000 bushels of old corn had been booked to arrive from the country, presumably for delivery purposes. No notices were given today, however, that any corn deliveries at all on September contracts would be made tomorrow.

After many nervous fluctuations today covering a range of 3¼ cents, the corn market as a whole finished ½ cent lower to ⅜ higher, Sept. $1.12@1.12⅛, an overnight setback of ¼ to ½ cent, Dec. 65½, May 65¾@65⅞, wheat, 1 cent to 2¼ up, Sept. $1.07⅝, Dec. $1.07¼@$1.07⅝, May $1.08⅜@$1.08½. Oats varying from ⅜ decline to ⅛ advance, Dec. 31@31⅛, and rye showing ⅜@⅞ bulge. In provisions, the outcome was 15 cents lower to a gain of 2 cents.

Cotton Weaker With Hedging

New York, Sept. 23. (AP) — Cotton weakened today as tired long liquidation added to the weight of Southern hedge selling and carried December below 8½ cents. That month sold off more from 8.56 to 8.44 and closed at the low with final prices 14 to 19 points net lower.

The market opened 3 to 6 points lower in sympathy with easier Liverpool cables. Late trading brought out other selling and final prices were at the lows for the day.

Bank Clearings 22.5 Per Cent Above Year Ago

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 23.—Aided by middle-of-the-month settlements, check transactions in the last week rose to the highest total since the week ended May 5 and also greatly exceeded those of the similar 1936 period, which did not have the benefit of such payments.

Bank clearings for 22 leading cities for the week ended September 22, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, aggregated $6,502,014,000, against $5,305,774,000 for the same week last year, an increase of 22.5 per cent.

This compares with a drop of 9.7 in a similar comparison made last week.

The volume at New York went to $4,074,753,000, compared with $3,189,792,000 in the like period of last year, a gain of 27.7 per cent. The amount at outside centers advanced to $2,427,261,000, which contrasted with $2,115,982,000 for the like 1936 week, a rise of 14.7 per cent.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Decline in Late Trading With Smaller Volume; U. S. Bonds Higher.

New York, Sept. 23.—Stocks had a deceptive appearance of firmness, heightened by slack trading, during the greater part of the day, but declined rather actively in the last hour. Closing prices were lower, moderately so, on a turnover of around 900,000 shares, most of it in the last hour. Government bonds developed strength. December wheat rose 1⅝ cents to 107¼ cents a bushel.

Stock trading developed into a skirmish between the bears who felt that way on general principles, aided by the chart followers and others who think the "signs" in the market itself point to lower prices, and the bulls (or others as they seem to be now) who regard stocks as well sold out. Investment trusts are said to be buying stock here and there, but those trading institutions have a habit, or many of them do, of unloading as quickly as they can whenever they see a stock acting poorly, without much regard to the position of the company.

Stocks opened lower, the influence probably being London sales on the closing of the fortnightly account. The day of reckoning on the other side passed off with less trouble than had been feared, but it nevertheless brought one brokerage house failure and probably forced considerable liquidation. After that was absorbed in this market prices grew firmer and held until after the lunch hour, when selling reappeared.

Steel Leads List.

Rails recovered early losses, only to fall back in the late dealings. Trading in Steel was the largest in the list. The price rallied more than 2 points after a poor start and then beat a retreat to a new low price for the day in the last hour. Other steel issues worked lower.

Rail equipments receded on expectation of smaller railroad buying. A bid and offer of 75 to 88 for American Locomotive preferred was printed on the tape in the fourth hour, against yesterday's final price of 88. A sale was then arranged at 86½. Coppers held around their previous closing levels most of the time. Silvers were mixed. Cerro lost a point. Oils, utilities, rubbers and motors weakened.

An exception to the higher trend in chemicals was duPont. Monsanto and Allied found buyers. The various classes of Allegheny gave up 1 to 8 points on first offerings. Tobacco had a poor day.

Admittedly a good deal of doubt exists among businessmen over future plans. Labor troubles and taxation provided enough uncertainty and to that niw is added fears of a reduction in consumer purchasing. Something is to be said for the brighter side. Not all businessmen are pessimistic, by any means. Chairman Sloan, of General Motors, who for sometime has been cautious over the subject of public response to higher prices for motor cars, said today he thought business had not lost its momentum and that the volume next year would exceed that of this year, although the pace would slacken.

Manufacturers are popularly supposed to have built up inventories last spring in anticipation of higher costs, but the experience of many consumers is that retail stores have no great inventories on hand. One view is that, if anything should set in motion a public buying wave, orders would quickly flow in to the manufacturers. One view is that the outlook for quick consumption goods is now much better than it is for the heavy industries, which are feeling the railroad retrenchments, the slackness in building construction and the continued timidity of the public utilities, still menaced by the Government.

Odd Lots.

"Probably at no time during the past four and a half years has the situation been so confusing as at the moment, and the future so obscure. Business prediction run the whole gamut from buoyant optimism to thorough-going pessimism. Stock market advances range from 'be bold and buy' all the way to what amounts to 'sell and scram.'" —Weingarten & Co., market letter. . . . Brokers think the market would prove to be just as thin on the upside as it has been on the downside, once a buying movement got under way. . . . That is cool comfort to those listening for the margin caller. . . . "Foreign selling hasn't been responsible for this decline," said a prominent Wall Street man in a position to get accurate knowledge on market operations, "just forget about that."

Reduction.

In announcing its intention to reduce expenditures on maintenance of way and equipment over the next two months, unless some relief on mounting expenses is obtained, possibly through rate increases, the Pennsylvania will not be alone in adopting such measures. Railroads generally try to hold up net income by cutting down on maintenance when the necessity arises and make good the deficit when times improve. Income for the early months of this year no doubt could have been shown larger had maintenance costs been maintained at 1936 levels. Maintenance is now costing more than it has for many years, even with less of it done, because of higher labor and materials. The plans to skimp maintenance naturally will involve a reduction in employment on the railroads and smaller orders for steel and other materials.

Montgomery Ward Gains in First Half

Chicago, Sept. 23. (AP) — Montgomery Ward & Co. reported today net profit for the six months ended July 31 was $9,049,644, compared with $7,101,876 for the same period a year ago.

This represents earnings of $1.60 a share on common stock now outstanding after providing for Class A dividends. The profit for the first half of 1936 was equal to $1.40 a share.

Net sales for the first half of the year were $195,746,000, an increase of 27.7 per cent over the volume for the same period of 1936.

Mutual Agency Announces Its 92d Birthday

Company Now Has in Force a $25,000,000 Business in District.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Washington Agency of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., of Newark, N. J., is 92 years old this week, H. Lawrence Choate, local general agent for the company, announces. Joseph C. Lewis was appointed as the first agent of the company in Washington, in September, 1845, and in that month wrote $30,000 insurance on nine lives. He was the first life insurance agent in the District of Columbia and, as a result of the business foundation he laid, the company now has $25,000,000 in force here.

Mr. Lewis was very successful in his business. He was an ardent Baptist and a liberal contributor to the church. A public spirited citizen, he served on the Board of Education, and built an attractive home on what is now Georgia avenue, near Rock Creek Church road. At that time there were only two other houses between it and Florida avenue, then the city boundary.

One of the guests of honor at the agency's annual banquet at the Chevy Chase Club, was B. H. Stickney, the grandson of Mr. Lewis. The agency's sessions this week have been led by Herbert G. Kenagy, superintendent of agencies, and William H. Gaither, field service manager. Emphasis on studying service to policyholders, has been stressed. Present members of the agency are Edwin P. Parker, James A. DeForce, Croom Walker, Charles M. Schwab, Francis F. Miller, Dwight T. Scott, Joseph W. Gibson, Frank D. Roach, George C. Campbell, George T. Howard, Adolph Krechel, Roscoe Applegate, V. Louise Bergman, Theodore E. Gero and Mr. Choate, general agent.

Cost Accountants.

Nelson A. Miller, assistant chief of the market research division, of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, at the opening fall session of Washington Chapter, National Association of Cost Accountants, meeting this week at the Hamilton Hotel, said the majority of small stores in the country, although they have need for the benefits of up-to-date cost accounting control, are not in a position to take advantage of scientific cost control methods.

Mr. Miller stated the small retailers who can recognize the benefits to be derived from proper accounting, control, and up-to-date merchandising records and methods, are exceptions, and that the small dealers who need most attention are often those who are the least likely prospects for the cost accountant.

He reminded that the more progressive merchants who are doing a good job of retailing in their respective classifications are the ones most likely to be receptive to up-to-date methods in not only account procedure, but in all phases of merchandising.

Mr. Miller was assisted in his discourse by W. H. Meserole, of the same division of the Department of Commerce. Mr. Meserole had charge of time studies, customer observations and traffic studies for the various cost studies conducted by the department.

The subject developed at the meeting dealt with the practical application of scientific cost methods developed for the druggists in the St. Louis drug survey. It was shown how the average druggist might apply, on a simplified basis, some of the cost methods developed in this survey.

It was explained that some drug store products have a typically low expense for handling, while other items in the same store require a heavy expense charge. These considerations must be taken into account when planning the profitable operation of a drug store.

Items that have low overhead cost are generally those with rapid turnover, with low inventory investment compared to dollar of sales, lower priced items, and items that require a minimum of selling effort and time. On the other hand, greater expense is incurred by items that have higher unit value, a relatively low volume of sales compared with inventory investment, or slow turnover, and which require longer selling time due to size, color, or style selection by the consumer. These latter items naturally require a wider margin between the cost and selling price.

The final measure of a druggist's merchandising skill may be the manner in which he balances his high and low margin items, in face of price competition, to arrive at a general store markup which will cover total store expenses and leave him a reasonable operating profit.

The more than 300 employes of Riggs National Bank assembled at Wardman Park Hotel this week to hear William H. Neal, vice president of Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., Winston-Salem, N. C., and president of the Financial Advertisers Association, talk on customer and public relations. President Robert V.

9-Power Treaty Action Talked; Hull Is Silent

crisis said he had heard nothing from those governments on the matter.

Refers to Policy Statement.

To another question on whether the invoking of the Kellogg-Briand treaty, renouncing war as an instrument of national policy, had been considered, Hull referred reporters to his statement of August 23, which held the Hull declaration on July 16, setting forth principles of the United States foreign policy as applied to the Far Eastern situation.

The August 23 statement said:

"We consider applicable throughout the world, in the Pacific area as elsewhere, the principles set forth in the statement of July 16. That statement of principles is comprehensive and basic. It embraces the principles embodied in many treaties, including the Washington Conference treaties and the Kellogg-Briand Pact of Paris."

The July 16 statement, to which more than 50 governments responded favorably, condemned "the use of force in pursuit of policy" and "interference in the internal affairs of other countries."

Parley Unnecessary.

It advocated "adjustment of problems in international relations by processes of peaceful negotiation and agreement," and laid emphasis on necessity for observance of sanctity of treaties.

There is nothing in the nine-power treaty to require a formal conference on any problem arising. Section 7 reads:

"The contracting powers agree that whenever a situation arises which in the opinion of any one of them involves the application of the stipulations of the present treaty, and renders desirable discussion of such application, there shall be full and frank communication between the contracting powers concerned."

Consultations with other powers on the present crisis have been under way for some time, but up to the present the United States has insisted on following an independent course in presenting its views to both China and Japan.

The Maritime Commission said its $30 bonus is in addition to protection given the seamen, as Government employes, under the United States Employes Compensation Act. Two-thirds pay for life in case of permanent total disability is provided by the act "and substantial compensation for partial disability, temporary total disability or death."

Refers to Spain and China.

The waters to which the commission's action applies were given as:

"1. Territorial waters of Spain, Spanish Morocco and the Balearic Islands, including waters between the Balearic Islands and the Spanish mainland.

"2. The Yellow Sea and the East China Sea, including all those waters between Korea, Japan, the Riuki Islands, Formosa and the Chinese mainland, north of but excluding Hongkong."

The American Pioneer Line operates 13 Government-owned ships on two routes, one through the Mediterranean Sea and the other to the Far East. One of these vessels is the Wichita, the seamen of which threatened a sit-down strike unless paid a $250 bonus for a scheduled voyage to China with 19 bombing planes aboard. As the Wichita arrived at San Pedro, Calif., from Baltimore early this month, President Roosevelt issued his order stopping the carrying of munitions to either China or Japan aboard Government-owned vessels, and the Wichita's cargo was unloaded.

Reich Spurns War Inquiry.

Geneva, Sept. 23 (AP).—Germany today refused to have anything to do with the League of Nations' investigation of the undeclared war between China and Japan.

Through its consul-general at Geneva, the Berlin government informed Joseph Avenol, the League's secretary-general, that Germany would not participate in the advisory committee revived by the League to deal with the Far Eastern crisis.

Germany has an anti-Communist pact with Japan, but also has growing commercial interests in China.

Adventists Plan New Labors in China War Zone

Seizure of their Shanghai headquarters by the Japanese and their subsequent evacuation of the city have not discouraged Seventh-Day Adventist missionaries, according to a cablegram recieved from China yesterday at the Takoma Park national headquarters of the denomination. Prof. Frederick Griggs president of the China Division conference, announced in the cable that he and his workers have established temporarily in Hongkong and already are planning rehabilitation of their damaged Shanghai building.

More assistants are needed in Hongkong, Griggs said. He urged immediate departure for China of the seven families under appointment who have been held up in this country because of the war, as well as other missionaries on furlough here whose return has been delayed. Workers who have been evacuated to Manila already have been recalled to China and will be sent to sections of the country where war has not yet broken out.

The present quarters in the Hongkong English settlement are safe from violence, Griggs believes. The medical program is being carried on in a rented building in the French settlement.

The missionaries are being subjected to no unnecessary danger, it was announced. Those in northwest China and in the Hankow section have been asked to evacuate and probably will go to Hongkong to join the rest. "We are not pitting the lives of our missionaries against any of our property that may be destroyed over there, and we want them safe under all circumstances," said the Rev. J. L. McElhany of Takoma Park, president of the world's general conference.

Letters mailed early this month before the missionaries left Shanghai contain eyewitness accounts of the horrors which accompanied the Japanese bombardment of the city. H. L. Shull, manager of the denominational publishing house there, writes that he can account for less than 40 of his 100 native workers who lived in a section where the attack was particularly ruthless.

As he and other missionaries attempted to rescue the workers following the attack, they could see "hundreds of human bodies lying in the street, some decapitated while others had arms and legs blown off and mutilated otherwise. In order to reach our workers we had to step over scores of dead bodies and walk through pools of blood. We saw three men sitting in the front seat of a truck, dead. In seven passenger cars on the street where the bomb exploded were bodies of occupants, some of whom were foreigners."

Of the bombing of the Palace Hotel, where about 60 were killed, Shull writes: "A cloud of smoke arose following the bombing, and out of this cloud emerged scores of people with blood spurting from wounds all over their bodies and smeared over their faces and clothes. Men, women and children ran by with great gashes in their legs, arms and bodies.

Television Tests To Be Conducted By NBC Here Soon

Inauguration of a series of experimental transmissions of outdoor events by television was announced here last night by the National Broadcasting Co.

A portable television station to be used in the experiments, the first to be built in the United States, is now under construction, according to the announcement, made for Lenox R. Lohr, president of the broadcasting company.

"The outdoor experimentation," the announcement quoted Lohr, "will be another forward step in the television tests conducted in cooperation with the Radio Corporation of America, N. B. C.'s parent company. Immediately after delivery of the new station October 18, N. B. C. engineers will begin an intensive schedule fo televising outdoor scenes and events. Football games and other sports, paraders and news events are listed in the outdoor schedule. All of the work, however, will be strictly experimental, with a view to improving equipment and methods."

Power Balance Hangs on Duce Quitting Spain

Anglo-French Tie-up May Result in All Italians Leaving Franco.

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 23.—An authoritative source declared tonight a new balance of power in Europe was made possible by the expected adhesion of Premier Mussolini to the Anglo-French working agreement.

This source asserted Mussolini gave France a definite promise that no more Italian troops would go to Spain if Italy, Great Britain and France could agree, as expected, on Italy's proper place in the Mediterranean antipiracy patrol and on other questions.

A responsible source said a "satisfactory solution" of the Spanish situation now was in sight.

Diplomatic circles interpreted this as an indication Great Britain and France now hope to induce Il Duce to withdraw Italian troops already in Spain as well as to guarantee to send no more.

Authorities at Rome gave no details on improved Italian relations with Great Britain and France on the eve of Il Duce's visit to Reichsfueher Hitler of Germany.

Diplomatic circles there, however, declared it would be a logical step for Great Britain and France to strive for Italian friendliness before Mussolini meets Hitler, pointing out it would lessen the probability of an Italo-German agreement inimical to them.

Hurricane Drives North.

Miami, Fla., Sept. 23 (U.P.).—A tropical hurricane, raging in the Atlantic for almost a week, was expected to move northward a considerable distance east of Bermuda within the next 24 hours, the Federal hurricane warning system said tonight.

Mystery Planes Save Nanking, Rout 50 Japanese Bombers

The cholera epidemic in Shanghai reached grave proportions. Officials of the International Settlement appealed for outside help. The food situation in the Settlement also was acute. The municipal council announced yesterday it had "arrived at a satisfactory agreement with the Japanese authorities under which the Settlement would obtain essential foodstuffs from warehouses in the areas north of Soochow Creek (inside Japanese lines)." Later, this announcement was canceled, indicating new difficulties have arisen.

front, was not hit, and no foreign lives were lost so far as could be learned.

Many bombs were dropped along the new Canton-Hankow Railway, along which South China has been sending reinforcements to the northern fronts.

The Japanese previously had announced they would not bomb this railway until after September 24, and had warned foreigners not to travel on it after that date.

Chinese defense planes rose to and had warned foreigners not to meet the invaders, but were hopelessly outnumbered and the raiding planes completed their leisurely work of destruction before disappearing to the north.

[Japan's air forces carried their campaign of death and terror to a score or more cities throughout nearly all of eastern China, the Associated Press reported.

[In Shanghai a Japanese navy spokesman declared the bombings would continue "in order to bring the war to an early conclusion and make it impossible for China to continue its anti-Japanese policies."

[Japanese air squadrons invaded southern Shantung Province, hitherto immune from their attacks, and bombed Yenchow and Tsining, important railway cities. A lone raider dropped bombs on Tsinanfu, the provincial capital. Other raids were made on Hsuchowfu in northern Kiangsu Province, junction of the north-south Tientsin-Pukow Railway and the east-west Lunghai trunk line, and other nearby cities.

[United States Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson and his staff remained in the embassy at Nanking, to which they returned after Wednesday's air raids, ending a two-day sojourn aboard American gunboats on the Yangtze River.—Editor's note.]

New Shanghai Offensive.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Friday), Sept. 24.—The Japanese army opened a new offensive here today after 24 hours of air raids along the 2,000-mile China front, in which thousands of Chinese civilians were killed.

A spokesman for Gen. Chang Chih-chung, Chinese commander here, said at 1 a. m. that the heaviest fighting that had occurred since the Shanghai battle started August 12 was taking place northwest of the International Settlement.

Earlier he had announced 4,000 Japanese infantrymen had been disembarked from five transports at the wharves of the Japanese N. Y. K. Steamship Line in the International Settlement, bringmg the total Japanese reinforcements this week to 40,000.

All these fresh troops were believed to have been thrown into today's battle.

Drive on Liuhang.

The center of the Japanese push again was around the town of Liuhang, just northwest of the International Settlement on the Shanghai-Liuho motor road.

Japanese artillery began a heavy barrage at 11:30 last night, and their infantry began advancing soon after midnight.

Chinese said their machine-gun nests and fighters of the "Big Sword Corps" had halted an earlier Japanese attack last night.

The spokesman said an entire Japanese detachment of 300 men was wiped out near the village of Yaoche, and that the Japanese were suffering "very heavy losses all along the Shanghai front."

9-Power Treaty Action Talked; Hull Is Silent

crisis said he had heard nothing from those governments on the matter.

Refers to Policy Statement.

To another question on whether the invoking of the Kellogg-Briand treaty, renouncing war as an instrument of national policy, had been considered, Hull referred reporters to his statement of August 23, which held the Hull declaration on July 16, setting forth principles of the United States foreign policy as applied to the Far Eastern situation.

The August 23 statement said:

"We consider applicable throughout the world, in the Pacific area as elsewhere, the principles set forth in the statement of July 16. That statement of principles is comprehensive and basic. It embraces the principles embodied in many treaties, including the Washington Conference treaties and the Kellogg-Briand Pact of Paris."

The July 16 statement, to which more than 50 governments responded favorably, condemned "the use of force in pursuit of policy" and "interference in the internal affairs of other countries."

Parley Unnecessary.

It advocated "adjustment of problems in international relations by processes of peaceful negotiation and agreement," and laid emphasis on necessity for observance of sanctity of treaties.

There is nothing in the nine-power treaty to require a formal conference on any problem arising. Section 7 reads:

"The contracting powers agree that whenever a situation arises which in the opinion of any one of them involves the application of the stipulations of the present treaty, and renders desirable discussion of such application, there shall be full and frank communication between the contracting powers concerned."

Consultations with other powers on the present crisis have been under way for some time, but up to the present the United States has insisted on following an independent course in presenting its views to both China and Japan.

The Maritime Commission said its $50 bonus is in addition to protection given the seamen, as Government employes, under the United States Employes Compensation Act. Two-thirds pay for life in case of permanent total disability is provided by the act "and substantial compensation for partial disability, temporary total disability or death."

Refers to Spain and China.

The waters to which the commission's action applies were given as:

"1. Territorial waters of Spain, Spanish Morocco and the Balearic Islands, including waters between the Balearic Islands and the Spanish mainland.

"2. The Yellow Sea and the East China Sea, including all those waters between Korea, Japan, the Riuki Islands, Formosa and the Chinese mainland, north of but excluding Hongkong."

The American Pioneer Line operates 13 Government-owned ships on two routes, one through the Mediterranean Sea and the other to the Far East. One of these vessels is the Wichita, the seamen of which threatened a sit-down strike unless paid a $250 bonus for a scheduled voyage to China with 19 bombing planes aboard. As the Wichita arrived at San Pedro, Calif., from Baltimore early this month, President Roosevelt issued his order stopping the carrying of munitions to either China or Japan aboard Government-owned vessels, and the Wichita's cargo was unloaded.

Reich Spurns War Inquiry.

Geneva, Sept. 23 (AP).—Germany today refused to have anything to do with the League of Nations' investigation of the undeclared war between China and Japan.

Through its consul-general at Geneva, the Berlin government informed Joseph Avenol, the League's secretary-general, that Germany would not participate in the advisory committee revived by the League to deal with the Far Eastern crisis.

Germany has an anti-Communist pact with Japan, but also has growing commercial interests in China.

Adventists Plan New Labors in China War Zone

Seizure of their Shanghai headquarters by the Japanese and their subsequent evacuation of the city have not discouraged Seventh-Day Adventist missionaries, according to a cablegram recieved from China yesterday at the Takoma Park national headquarters of the denomination. Prof. Frederick Griggs president of the China Division conference, announced in the cable that he and his workers have established temporarily in Hongkong and already are planning rehabilitation of their damaged Shanghai building.

More assistants are needed in Hongkong, Griggs said. He urged immediate departure for China of the seven families under appointment who have been held up in this country because of the war, as well as other missionaries on furlough here whose return has been delayed. Workers who have been evacuated to Manila already have been recalled to China and will be sent to sections of the country where war has not yet broken out.

The present quarters in the Hongkong English settlement are safe from violence, Griggs believes. The medical program is being carried on in a rented building in the French settlement.

The missionaries are being subjected to no unnecessary danger, it was announced. Those in northwest China and in the Hankow section have been asked to evacuate and probably will go to Hongkong to join the rest. "We are not pitting the lives of our missionaries against any of our property that may be destroyed over there, and we want them safe under all circumstances," said the Rev. J. L. McElhany of Takoma Park, president of the world's general conference.

Letters mailed early this month before the missionaries left Shanghai contain eyewitness accounts of the horrors which accompanied the Japanese bombardment of the city. H. L. Shull, manager of the denominational publishing house there, writes that he can account for less than 40 of his 100 native workers who lived in a section where the attack was particularly ruthless.

As he and other missionaries attempted to rescue the workers following the attack, they could see "hundreds of human bodies lying in the street, some decapitated while others had arms and legs blown off and mutilated otherwise. In order to reach our workers we had to step over scores of dead bodies and walk through pools of blood. We saw three men sitting in the front seat of a truck, dead. In seven passenger cars on the street where the bomb exploded were bodies of occupants, some of whom were foreigners."

Of the bombing of the Palace Hotel, where about 60 were killed, Shull writes: "A cloud of smoke arose following the bombing, and out of this cloud emerged scores of people with blood spurting from wounds all over their bodies and smeared over their faces and clothes. Men, women and children ran by with great gashes in their legs, arms and bodies.

Television Tests To Be Conducted By NBC Here Soon

Inauguration of a series of experimental transmissions of outdoor events by television was announced here last night by the National Broadcasting Co.

A portable television station to be used in the experiments, the first to be built in the United States, is now under construction, according to the announcement, made for Lenox R. Lohr, president of the broadcasting company.

"The outdoor experimentation," the announcement quoted Lohr, "will be another forward step in the television tests conducted in cooperation with the Radio Corporation of America, N. B. C.'s parent company. Immediately after delivery of the new station October 18, N. B. C. engineers will begin an intensive schedule fo televising outdoor scenes and events. Football games and other sports, paraders and news events are listed in the outdoor schedule. All of the work, however, will be strictly experimental, with a view to improving equipment and methods."

Power Balance Hangs on Duce Quitting Spain

Anglo-French Tie-up May Result in All Italians Leaving Franco.

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 23.—An authoritative source declared tonight a new balance of power in Europe was made possible by the expected adhesion of Premier Mussolini to the Anglo-French working agreement.

This source asserted Mussolini gave France a definite promise that no more Italian troops would go to Spain if Italy, Great Britain and France could agree, as expected, on Italy's proper place in the Mediterranean antipiracy patrol and on other questions.

A responsible source said a "satisfactory solution" of the Spanish situation now was in sight.

Diplomatic circles interpreted this as an indication Great Britain and France now hope to induce Il Duce to withdraw Italian troops already in Spain as well as to guarantee to send no more.

Authorities at Rome gave no details on improved Italian relations with Great Britain and France on the eve of Il Duce's visit to Reichsfueher Hitler of Germany.

Diplomatic circles there, however, declared it would be a logical step for Great Britain and France to strive for Italian friendliness before Mussolini meets Hitler, pointing out it would lessen the probability of an Italo-German agreement inimical to them.

Hurricane Drives North.

Miami, Fla., Sept. 23 (U.P.).—A tropical hurricane, raging in the Atlantic for almost a week, was expected to move northward a considerable distance east of Bermuda within the next 24 hours, the Federal hurricane warning system said tonight.

The cholera epidemic in Shanghai reached grave proportions. Officials of the International Settlement appealed for outside help. The food situation in the Settlement also was acute. The municipal council announced yesterday it had "arrived at a satisfactory agreement with the Japanese authorities under which the Settlement would obtain essential foodstuffs from warehouses in the areas north of Soochow Creek (inside Japanese lines)." Later, this announcement was canceled, indicating new difficulties have arisen.

front, was not hit, and no foreign lives were lost so far as could be learned.

Many bombs were dropped along the new Canton-Hankow Railway, along which South China has been sending reinforcements to the northern fronts.

The Japanese previously had announced they would not bomb this railway until after September 24, and had warned foreigners not to travel on it after that date.

Chinese defense planes rose to and had warned foreigners not to meet the invaders, but were hopelessly outnumbered and the raiding planes completed their leisurely work of destruction before disappearing to the north.

[Japan's air forces carried their campaign of death and terror to a score or more cities throughout nearly all of eastern China, the Associated Press reported.

[In Shanghai a Japanese navy spokesman declared the bombings would continue "in order to bring the war to an early conclusion and make it impossible for China to continue its anti-Japanese policies."

[Japanese air squadrons invaded southern Shantung Province, hitherto immune from their attacks, and bombed Yenchow and Tsining, important railway cities. A lone raider dropped bombs on Tsinanfu, the provincial capital. Other raids were made on Hsuchowfu in northern Kiangsu Province, junction of the north-south Tientsin-Pukow Railway and the east-west Lunghai trunk line, and other nearby cities.

[United States Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson and his staff remained in the embassy at Nanking, to which they returned after Wednesday's air raids, ending a two-day sojourn aboard American gunboats on the Yangtze River.—Editor's note.]

New Shanghai Offensive.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Friday), Sept. 24.—The Japanese army opened a new offensive here today after 24 hours of air raids along the 2,000-mile China front, in which thousands of Chinese civilians were killed.

A spokesman for Gen. Chang Chih-chung, Chinese commander here, said at 1 a. m. that the heaviest fighting that had occurred since the Shanghai battle started August 12 was taking place northwest of the International Settlement.

Earlier he had announced 4,000 Japanese infantrymen had been disembarked from five transports at the wharves of the Japanese N. Y. K. Steamship Line in the International Settlement, bringmg the total Japanese reinforcements this week to 40,000.

All these fresh troops were believed to have been thrown into today's battle.

Drive on Liuhang.

The center of the Japanese push again was around the town of Liuhang, just northwest of the International Settlement on the Shanghai-Liuho motor road.

Japanese artillery began a heavy barrage at 11:30 last night, and their infantry began advancing soon after midnight.

Chinese said their machine-gun nests and fighters of the "Big Sword Corps" had halted an earlier Japanese attack last night.

The spokesman said an entire Japanese detachment of 300 men was wiped out near the village of Yaoche, and that the Japanese were suffering "very heavy losses all along the Shanghai front."

Bob Burns Says—

One of the nicest things about a home is that when things get tough outside you always have a place to retreat to for consolation. Since I started growin' this beard and long hair for a picture, I've felt so self-conscious I been sneaking' up alleys and I was so glad to get home because I figgered I looked all right to my own folks anyhow.

The other night when I came home I started fishin' for a compliment and I says to my wife, "With this terrible lookin' beard and this long hair I oughta be playin' the part of a bum in pictures." My wife says, "Well, you oughta be able to take that part very nicely but you'd haveta tidy up a little bit."

Study of a few rooming houses for colored women revealed that the average minimum weekly room rent was $3 and the average maximum $3.15.

In addition, the board included lists of food quantities needed for diet for "moderately active" employed women, and price lists for restaurant meals conforming to the adequate diet. The figures were obtained from the Bureau of Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture.

No action was taken on the material submitted by the Minimum Wage Board, but was left for further study of the conference members.

The material submitted by the board was not broken down into budget estimates.

Rail Man Predicts Federal Ownership

Pittsburgh, Sept. 23 (AP).—Use of the Nation's railroads as "social reform laboratories" will head them "directly, inexorably toward Government ownership," Dr. C. S. Duncan, economist of the Association of American Railroads, predicted today.

Addressing the Allegheny Regional Advisory Board, the economist asserted.

"Private credit cannot withstand the encroachment of public credit. Private capital secured on the basis of earning power cannot long maintain the unequal struggle with public funds derived from taxing power."

Jacob Hutchingson Funeral Tomorrow

Funeral services for Jacob L. Hutchingson, 74, a lifelong Washington resident, who died Wednesday, will be conducted at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow at the James T. Ryan funeral home, 317 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, followed by requiem mass at St. Peter's Church. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Hutchingson served for many years in the architect's office of the Treasury Department, retiring in 1931.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Hutchingson, of 512 Seward square, and two nephews, Thomas L. Moffatt and John P. Moffatt, both of Washington.

5 Papers Donate $100 for Play Contest Prizes

Donation of $100 for prizes in the one-act play tournament, which will be held at Roosevelt High School, from October 11 to 23, was announced yesterday by the Community Center Department of the District Board of Education. Contributors are the five Washington newspapers.

The prize money, which is to be used in furthering the work of the winning theater groups, is divided into $50 for first place, $25 for second place and two awards of $12.50 for third and fourth places.

U.S., Britain To Seek Control Of 'Hot Money'

Tax on Alien Investments Is Held Possible Solution of Problem.

The United States and Great Britain are to explore the possibility of reciprocal action for control of "hot money," the sudden and potentially disastrous shifting of huge sums of investment funds from one country to another, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau revealed yesterday.

It was the first disclosure of any specific topic under discussion at the current conferences between the Treasury Secretary and Sir Frederick Phillips, Undersecretary of the British Treasury, which have been in progress all week. The "hot money" situation has caused concern to the Administration for more than a year.

Foreign investment funds estimated at $8,000,000,000 are now in this country, and the possibility of sudden withdrawal of such a sum, with the attendant adverse effect on the economic situation here has been given much thought.

Tax to Be Discussed.

Secretary Morgenthau said that when Undersecretary Roswell Magill returns to the Capital Saturday, Morgenthau, Sir Frederick and Magill will take up the subject of taxing of alien investments within each country. Playing a part in the conference will be results of a joint study, long under way by the Treasury, the Federal Reserve Board and the Securities and Exchange Commission.

A reciprocal agreement between the two leading financial powers, Britain and the United States, for the taxing of alien investments was mentioned by Morgenthau as a possibility. Carrying out such an agreement would, of course, require legislation, it was pointed out.

The need for increasing United States taxation on investments of foreigners, in order to curb huge money movements here, has been coupled with the fear that such high taxation might be construed as discriminatory.

It was said in official circles that the Treasury desires from the British an agreement for the exchange of tax information that would make it easier to trace foreign funds here. Sought also, it was said, is a reciprocal agreement on taxation that would avoid "double taxation" and would permit this country to increase its taxes, possibly by boosting the rate of the withholding tax on American income of aliens.

Situation Currently Quiet.

Easy tax laws of some of the British possessions have provided a tax refuge for American funds, it was brought out in the recent Congressional hearings on "tax evasion and avoidance." Organization of foreign corporations by Americans to reduce their tax payments was reported.

Asked at his press conference yesterday whether the "hot money" situation was "getting hotter," the Treasury Secretary replied that "as a matter of fact it has been fairly quiet for the past couple of months," despite the hostilities in Europe and the Far East.

Questioning as to the possibility of the Treasury, in its borrowing, shifting from the sale of Treasury bills to some new form of security, brought word that Morgenthau and the executive committee of the open market committee of the Federal Reserve Board will confer on "the bill market" next Wednesday.

At the same time the Secretary announced that another $50,000,000 nine-month issue of bills will be offered Monday.

There will be no announcement of the revised budget estimates until President Roosevelt returns from his Western trip, Morgenthau said.

American Weekly Lifts Its Hearst Restrictions

New York, Sept. 23 (AP).—The American Weekly, a Sunday newspaper magazine, announced today that effective January 2, 1938, it will be distributed for the first time with Sunday papers other than those owned by William Randolph Hearst.

The American Weekly, which started publication in 1896, said that with the additional papers its circulation would be 7,000,000 copies.
